18 Rounded Up In Mississippi Rights Murders

Sheriff, Deputy Arrested Second Time By Marshals

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

Federal marshals in Mississippi rounded up 18 persons today, including Neshoba County Sheriff Lawrence Rainey and his Deputy Cecil Price, on charges stemming from the slaying of three civil rights workers.

The 18 white men included 17 who were arrested in connection with the same case last month, but later released when U.S. Commissioner Esther Carter dismissed charges against them.

Four of those arrested last month were not covered in the indictments served today, but one man, Richard Willis, 40, a Philadelphia, Miss., city policeman, was added to the case.

The 18 were named in two separate indictments returned Friday by a federal grand jury that previously refused to indict in the case. However, the refusal reportedly was before the FBI obtained two alleged "confessions" in the case.

KEPT SECRET

The contents of one of the indictments, kept secret until today, charged the group with conspiring to injure, threaten and intimidate the three civil rights workers—Michael Schwerner, 24, Andrew Goodman, 20, both white New Yorkers, and James Chaney, 22, a Meridian, Miss., Negro.

The three disappeared June 21 while investigating the burning of a Negro church at Philadelphia, where Rainey and Price have their office.

Bodies of the three integrationists were found buried under a farm pond dam outside Philadelphia last August after an intensive federal search. At one point President Johnson had 500 servicemen participating in the search.

FIRST TWO

The first two brought in were arraigned under two civil rights indictments.

Billy Wayne Posey, 28, and Jimmy Townsend, 17, both of Philadelphia, Miss., were arraigned under a charge of conspiracy to violate the civil rights of any individual, and another section which violates civil rights while "acting under color of law."

The marshals led the men into the district court clerk's office where the U. S. commissioner, Esther Carter, asked them their names.

It was Miss Carter who last month dismissed charges against 21 suspects arrested by the FBI in connection with the triple slaying. She threw out the charges at a preliminary hearing after refusing to let an FBI agent testify concerning an alleged confession.

NGENDANDUMWE
Premier assassinated

African Premier Is Killed

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — Premier Pierre Ngendandumwe of the East African nation of Burundi was killed last night outside the maternity hospital in Bujumbura where his wife had just given birth to a baby, the Foreign Ministry reported today.

The premier had been appointed eight days ago in a move believed aimed at checking Red Chinese influence in Burundi.

"We presume it is a political murder," said a Belgian Foreign Ministry spokesman. He added that reports reaching Brussels said several persons had been arrested in connection with the slaying.

There was no independent word from Bujumbura, the Burundi capital just across the Congo's eastern border. The capital formerly was called Usumbura.

"We are shocked," said the Belgian spokesman. "He was a man we knew well. He was deputy premier when Burundi became independent in 1962. We had many contacts with him in Brussels, New York and Bujumbura. He was a difficult but loyal partner. We pay tribute to his loyalty."

Viet Pact Is Reached

SAIGON (UPI)—South Viet Nam's four major religious groups have agreed to put aside their political differences in order to step up the war against Communist Viet Cong guerrillas, it was disclosed today.

Informed sources said the Buddhists, the Roman Catholics and the Hoa Hao and Cao Dai sects have signed a proclamation signifying their willingness to curtail the squabbles that have been hampering the U.S.-supported anti-Communist war.

Sources said the agreement was reached yesterday at a meeting of representatives of the four groups.

Tanker Plane Crashes In Residential District

COMBINED AP & UPI

WICHITA, Kan.—A KC-135 tanker crashed into a residential district today and a newsman said at least 24 persons were dead.

George Doyle, news director for radio station KFH said casualties included seven military men, 10 children and seven adult civilians in the crash at 20th Street, and Piatt Avenue, six blocks from Wichita State University.

SEARCH MADE

Doyle said a search for additional bodies is being made.

One eyewitness said there are "bodies all around the crash." An Air Force chaplain said he had administered last rites to at least eight victims.

The devastation covered more than a square block. Firemen said at least 15 homes were afire when they arrived and they feared as many as 75 could be involved, so fast were the flames spreading.

There was no way of knowing immediately how many persons might be trapped in the homes.

EYE WITNESS

Gilbert Roman, a Sedgwick County sheriff's officer who saw the plane go down, said another plane with military markings appeared to be following it. Roman said he saw no indication of any collision.

He said the plane, which had just taken off from the Boeing Aircraft plant, was at an altitude of about 1,000 feet and was banking to the west when suddenly its engines cut off. Roman said he saw a metallic fragment fall from its tail, and the plane then nosed over and plummeted to the ground.

One body was recovered from a charred car and three persons were believed killed in another car which was turned into a ball of fire.

Every available ambulance and piece of fire-fighting equipment was called out in 14-degree weather to the Negro neighborhood.

John Ball, who lives near the scene of the crash, said he

END SEEMS NEAR FOR WINSTON CHURCHILL

LONDON (UPI) — Sir Winston Churchill lingered in a coma today, slipping closer to death from a stroke.

The end seemed near.

The 90 - year - old warrior - statesman spent a peaceful night, unconscious and unaware of pain or the anxiety of a watching world.

A solemn crowd gathered outside his residence.

A close friend of the family said there was little hope the doughty Churchill would rally as he had from the many illnesses of his long life, including two previous serious strokes.

Mill Valley Might Have Rec Bond Vote

Mill Valley voters may be asked next year to approve a bond issue for completion of Project 17 and other major park and recreation projects.

Three members of the city council, who met with the park and recreation commission today to discuss a long-range park plan, were urged by City Mgr. Bert Balmer to start thinking about putting such a bond issue on the ballot of the April, 1966, municipal election.

Nucleus of today's study session was a tentative five-year development plan submitted by Dean Meyer, chairman of the park and recreation commission.

Meyer's plan included such projects as a swimming pool in Project 17, rejuvenation of the community and youth center, and the Old Mill Park improvement plan, details of which are scheduled to get council consideration Feb. 1.

Meyer was told to return to a future session with still more detailed plans, including several smaller parks left out of the first version.

Balmer pointed out there would be little money in the coming year's budget for major park projects, because of the planned widening of Blithedale Avenue and the expected $60,000 cost of delays in building the city's boat harbor.

He urged that the council concentrate now on the old project, but said it should plan to include money in the coming budget to beef up maintenance of city parks.

To pay for such things as a community pool and other cost-ly projects, however, Balmer predicted "the town has to make up its mind to have one big bond issue so it can get its park and recreation facilities up to standard."

Present were six citizens as well as four members of the park and recreation commission and the three councilmen.

Councilman Albert E. White and George E. Wickham were absent.

Four Kennedy Johnson Aides Resign Posts

They are special assistants Kenneth O'Donnell and David Powers, special counsel Myer Feldman and Dr. Janet Travell, a White House physician.

The president announced that another Kennedy appointee, special assistant Lawrence F. O'Brien, had abandoned a plan to resign "at my urgent request."

Convoy Reaches North Flood Area

SACRAMENTO (AP)—A 48-truck convoy carrying supplies to flood-paralyzed Northern California communities reached Laytonville today on U.S. 101, the north-south coastal artery that had been choked off since Christmas week.

Shovel, Garbage Can Used In Cafe Fracas

A fracas at a San Anselmo restaurant—in which a shovel, tire jack, knife, pipe and garbage can were used as weapons—injured at least four persons early today. Four men were taken to Marin County jail on battery charges.

George Dumont of 15 Heartwood Court, San Rafael, manager of the Pandora Restaurant, at 112 Spaulding Street, and his son Richard, same address, both suffered leg injuries when they were kicked during the fight. The elder Dumont also was kicked in the groin.

Frank Smith, 24, of Millbrae, the chef, suffered a fractured left hand. He was treated at Marin General Hospital.

Darrell Hammock, 20, of 177 Canal Street, San Rafael, one of the four arrested, also was treated at the hospital for scalp cuts. He was hit on the head with a pipe.

George Dumont signed citizen's arrests of Hammock; John F. Werst, 19, of 55 Fairfax Street, San Rafael; Andrew Joseph Carrino, 20, of 5 Meadow Avenue, San Rafael, and Keith F. Kluever, 22, of "no fixed abode." San Anselmo police said Carrino was treated at the hospital, but there was no report on him there.

Police were first called to the restaurant 10 minutes before midnight. Restaurant employees said a carload of youths began a disagreement with the doorman, and one youth kicked the doorman in the side.

A larger group of youths turned up, and fought with Richard Dumont, Smith, and two other employees, Ray Halimy of San Francisco and Robert Wileman of 1360 Grand Avenue, San Rafael. The youth's drove away before police arrived.

Two hours later the youths returned. The elder Dumont said Hammock entered through the kitchen door with a shovel in his hand. Dumont took the shovel away, pushing Hammock outside the door.

Hammock went to a car, took out a tire jack and returned, according to the police report. A fight began, but who threw blows and who used what weapons could not be learned because

SHE USED HER HEAD, SORT OF

"It was dark in there," 12-year-old Willeen Duerner told Tamalpais Fireman Carl Carlson yesterday.

She had just spent more than 15 minutes stuck headfirst in the wall of her home at 438 Wellesley Avenue, Tamalpais Valley. The only ill effects she suffered were a little dizziness and a scraped arm where the fireman pulled her out.

Willeen's mother, Mrs. David C. Duerner, had dropped a fuse in the space between the inner and outer wall of the house and Willeen volunteered to go in after it. She got the fuse, but lost her grip when she handed it out to her mother.

Fireman Carlson came to the rescue. He had to remove the fusebox door to increase the space.

Navy Ship Hits Bridge; $50,000 Damage Caused

A Navy radar picket ship did an estimated $50,000 damage to the Richmond-San Rafael bridge yesterday.

The USS Locator struck a pier on the eastern side of the bridge shortly before 3 p.m., then swung around and hit a second piling.

Bridge traffic was not affected, and no one was injured.

The Navy said strong currents plus a "confusing maneuver" by a large Standard Oil tanker forced the Locator to cut its speed and thereby lose its maneuverability.

A spokesman said the radar ship had trouble with the current on her first turn into the main ship channel running under the bridge, and had come around for a second try when the tanker appeared to turn toward her.

Standard Oil Co. at Richmond, where the tanker was docking, said the accident appeared to be "entirely the Navy's fault."

The Locator returned to Treasure Island with a hole in the starboard bow and a gash in its side. The Navy said it would begin an immediate investigation to determine the exact cause of the accident.

Labor Says Take Over Railroads

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Railway labor leaders today called on the government to take over the nation's railroads. They said industry "no longer has sufficient concern" for the needs of the public.

George E. Leighty, chairman of the Railway Labor Executives Associates (RLEA) said the group planned to seek legislation at this session of Congress to carry out the proposal.

"We can get a number of congressmen and senators" to back the bill, he said.

U.S., Canada Car Tariffs Are Out

OTTAWA (AP) — Canada and the United States have agreed to eliminate tariffs on automobiles and new parts, opening the way for a North American common market for the automobile industry.

The plan, announced yesterday will lead to better integration of the two countries' car industries and will significantly lower manufacturing costs in Canada by increasing production runs and efficiency.

Eventually, the retail price of cars in Canada will go down but the immediate effect on prices will be negligible, officials said. Canadian car prices are about 18 per cent above those in the United States.

Earl K. Brownridge, president of the Motor Vehicles Manufacturers' Association, said new and heavy capital investment will be required to attain the objectives of the agreement.

Government officials estimated the manufacturers, most of them subsidiaries of U.S. companies, would save about $50 million a year. There were indications the money would be used for plant expansion.

The agreement does not include tires or replacement parts. It goes into effect immediately in Canada. President Johnson has to get congressional approval before it takes effect in the United States.

Under its terms, individual Americans may purchase Canadian cars in Canada and bring them home duty free. Canadians who buy new cars in the United States, however, would still have to pay an import duty of 17.5 per cent.

The agreement is subject to review before January 1968, and may be canceled by either country on 12 months' written notice.

Industry Minister C. M. Drury estimated that by the end of the 1968 model year the production of vehicles and parts in Canada will have expanded by about one third. This will mean more jobs in the Canadian auto industry which now employs about 1,000 in manufacturing and another 40,000 in the parts business.

European auto manufacturers who maintain assembly lines in Canada also will qualify for tariff-free exports to the United States, provided their product has at least 40 per cent North American content.

Volvo of Sweden, which has a small assembly plant in Dartmouth, N.S., qualifies under this rule, officials said. A company in Quebec Province which plans to start producing French Renault and Peugot cars under license this fall also will meet the requirement, information now available indicates.

Mapes Kin Found Dead In Hotel

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The nude body of a 52-year-old bachelor was found yesterday bound and beaten at the foot of a tiki statue amidst the Polynesian decor of his San Francisco hotel apartment.

Police said Oscar Mapes Robinson, whose family founded Reno's Mapes Hotel, was killed by two blows to the head with a Polynesian hand-carved sawtooth war club.

The club was a wall decoration in the well-to-do bachelor-artist's apartment in the Gaylord Hotel at 620 Jones Street in downtown San Francisco.

Police said they are looking for a man seen entering the hotel with Robinson late Thursday night, described by police as a stocky, neatly dressed Negro in his late 30's.

Car Theft Case Is Dismissed

Complaint alleging car theft against Woodrow Wilson Fitzsimmons, 21, and Gary William Motchar, 20, both of San Rafael, was dismissed Thursday in Marin Municipal Court on grounds of insufficient evidence.

Fitzsimmons, 830 B Street, then pleaded guilty to a misdemeanor charge of joy-riding in the same incident. Sentencing is scheduled Feb. 9.

The two were charged with taking a San Jose man's car in downtown San Rafael last Dec. 5. Motchar lives at 123 Auburn Street.

Mosquito Abatement Unit Elects

Frank Baccaglio, Novato rancher, was elected Thursday night as 1965 presdient of the Marin County Mosquito Abatement District.

Board members elected Harold Henry of Mill Valley as vice president and re-elected Clifton C. Cordes of Fairfax as secretary.

Named to the board to represent their cities for two-year terms were Hil Probert of Larkspur, Warren P. Landon of San Anselmo, Cordes, Albert E. Kogler of Corte Madera and James D. Russell of Ross. Mrs. John M. Douglas of San Rafael was appointed to a two-year term representing the county at large.

Trustees authorized G. Paul Jones, manager, and Harry L. Matthews, entomologist, to attend the annual conference of the California Mosquito Control Assn. in Riverside, Jan. 25-27.

The meeting was adjourned in memory of Frank B. Williams of Sausalito, who died Dec. 29. Williams represented Sausalito on the board for over 25 years.

WORLD NEWS IN BRIEF

Kerr Sees Peaceful Settlement

BERKELEY (UPI)—University of California President Clark Kerr expressed confidence last night that a peaceful settlement can be achieved in the Berkeley campus controversy over free speech.

Kerr

Kerr said he believes the administration, faculty and students will reach a concensus through negotiations. He also indicated his belief that a settlement through discussions was the only proper means of resolving the dispute.

"After all," Kerr told newsmen in an interview at his home, "the academic community has to live with itself. The student body, the teachers and the administration all have to have confidence in one another."

The student Free Speech Movement has demanded complete freedom of political expression on campus.

Also last night students who fell behind in class work because of the free speech demonstrations got a chance to avoid failing grades.

The emergency executive committee of the Berkeley campus Academic Senate announced rules under which students may receive a grade of E—for incomplete—instead of F.

Job For Brown's Sister-In-Law

SACRAMENTO (AP)—The name of the first woman ever selected for appointment to the State Personnel Board was sent by Gov. Edmund G. Brown today to the Senate for confirmation.

Mrs. Bonnell

On approval, Mrs. May Layne Bonnell of Sacramento will leave a $15,000-a-year post as assistant to the governor on appointments to accept the $8,000-a-year board position.

Mrs. Bonnell, a Democrat, is Brown's sister-in-law.

'Hello Dolly! You Still Here?'

Channing

"Golly, it's been quite a year," she said.

She hasn't missed a performance and has been seen by 624,000 persons who have paid four million dollars to see the show.

Wet Inauguration

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Weather Bureau won't say for sure, but its five-day forecast cautions that the weather for inauguration day could be bad. The forecast, issued yesterday for the five days ending Wednesday, Inauguration Day, called for "some precipitation" toward the end of the period.

MacDonald Rites

HOLLYWOOD (UPI)—Funeral services for Jeanette MacDonald, movie singing star of the 1930s noted for her roles opposite Nelson Eddy, will be conducted Monday. Miss MacDonald, 57, died Thursday in Houston, Tex., of a heart ailment.

SANDRINGHAM, England (AP)—Queen Mother Elizabeth, 64, was reported ill with influenza at the royal estate in eastern England today. She had been out in cold weather following pheasant shooting parties on the estate earlier in the week.

U.S. Temperatures

NEW YORK (UPI) — The lowest temperature in the nation as reported to the U.S. Weather Bureau this morning. Excluding Alaska and Hawaii, was 32 below zero at Brainerd, Minn. The high yesterday was 80 at Brownsville, Tex.

During a railroad rate war in the mid-1880s, the fare from Kansas City to Los Angeles dropped to just $1.

Italy Train Blast

BONASSOLA, Italy (AP) — Dynamite being unloaded from a freight train exploded today just as a passenger train passed on an adjoining track. Police said at least seven persons were killed and 50 injured in a series of blasts.

Trade With Russia

TOKYO (AP) — Japan's Mitsubishi heavy industries company reported yesterday it has delivered to the Soviet Union a 3,476-ton tanker for transporting liquified petroleum gas.

Barry To Fight

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Barry Goldwater pledges a fight to keep control of the Republican party from those who did not fully support his bid for the presidency last November. Goldwater yielded to pressure early this week and helped arrange the coming stepdown of Dean Burch as the party's national chairman. As for himself, Goldwater said last night: "If I never run for public office again, it's not going to break my heart."

In Money Trouble

SACRAMENTO (AP) — The Department of Employment announces it may have to borrow up to seven million dollars from other state funds to continue payment of disability and hospital benefits. Officials said yesterday they would first look at how much money went into the California Disability Fund between October and December and also watch for passage of emergency measures by the 1965 legislature.

Ample Water Supply

VISALIA (AP) — An eight-foot Sierra snowpack means that the southern San Joaquin Valley will have an ample supply of water this summer. An aerial survey of the High Sierra back country in Sequoia and Kings Canyon national parks showed the snowpack substantially deeper than last year at this date. A ground survey will be conducted at the end of the month.

Professor Missing

SAN JOSE (AP)—A police all-points bulletin was circulating today in the search for a San Jose State College professor missing since Jan. 8. Political science Prof. William H. Vatcher, 43, reportedly left his apartment over a week ago on a weekend trip to the mountains, Palo Alto police reported. A search for him began last night.

King On Tour

BANGKOK (AP) — King Olav of Norway, wearing a general's uniform, today got a glimpse of Thailand's military tradition from the sword to the rocket. He began the second day of his eight-day state visit by placing a wreath on a memorial dedicated to the war dead of this Southeast Asian country.

To Visit London

MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko is planning to visit London March 16 at the invitation of British Foreign Secretary Patrick Gordon Walker. Moscow radio made the announcement.

Santa Barbara? In North State

SANTA BARBARA (UPI) — When residents of this coastal city speak of "going to the city" they mean San Francisco (380 driving miles to the north) rather than Los Angeles (94 miles to the southeast).

Thus State Sen. Alvin C. Weingand, D - Santa Barbara, explained yesterday, at a news conference to spell out his support of a bill to divide California into two states.

"The culture of Santa Barbara County is much more compatible with the north than with the south," Weingand said.

"Traditionally, when anyone in Santa Barbara says 'We are going to the city,' they mean San Francisco, not Los Angeles," he said.

"I don't want Los Angeles to dominate the government of California and that is why I became a co-author (of the bill)," Weingand said. "Everyone knows Los Angeles, Orange and San Diego Counties will control the state if reapportionment becomes a fact."

The bill sponsored by State Sen. Richard E. Dolwig, R-Redwood City — which Weingand admitted has little chance of passing the Assembly — would include Santa Barbara County in North California although it is often, if not generally, thought of as a part of Southern California.

State Board Gets College Tax Proposal

LOS ANGELES (UPI) —The state Board of Education yesterday heard a proposal to levy a state - wide property tax of 20 cents per $100 of assessed valuation to finance junior colleges.

Dr. Ronald Cox, assistant state superintendent of public instruction, presented the plan which would increase the state's financial commitment to junior colleges from the present 22 per cent to 38.7 per cent. The plan provided for an eventual commitment of 45 per cent as called for under the state's master plan for higher education.

The plan met opposition by representatives of the California School Boards Association and the California Junior College Association. Representatives of both groups expressed fears that the plan would evolve into "political dynamite" with an all - inclusive junior college district being formed.

Split State Proposal Hit

A proposal in Sacramento that California be split into two states brought strong criticism today from Thomas Skornia of Ross, chairman of the Marin Democratic Assembly.

Skornia said he was "shocked" that Marin's state senator, John F. McCarthy (R - San Rafael), had joined as co-sponsor of the bill, proposed by Sen. Richard Dolwig (R-San Mateo).

"Jack McCarthy must certainly know that there are sound legislative alternatives for protecting Northern California's vital interests without breaking up the nation's greatest state," said Skornia.

Marinite Lives Through Floods

Molo Lowell of Mill Valley is back from Fortuna, where she was stranded for a month by floods. She won't be able to get her car and trailer home for another month.

"I would like people to know what an awful disaster it was," said Mrs. Lowell today. "It just obliterated a part of the country."

She said she and her partner, Al Williams, with their labrador retriever, left home on Thanksgiving to go to Northern California where she planned to sketch redwoods. "It started raining the first day of December in Red Bluff," she said.

The rains got worse near the Mad River. After they parked car and trailer at Fortuna, it started to "really rain." The river looked "like a bad snake, green from grass and yellow from dirt," she said.

Mrs. Lowell said they met four small children, two of whom were scantily dressed, and she wrapped her sweater around one. The children's parent's went to get something in their trailer and were drowned, she said. The children were saved.

"I saw two houses, one on top of another and a Christmas tree on top of that," said Mrs. Lowell, who lives at 10 Locust Street where she has a school and toy collection.

"On Christmas the Red Cross opened a big building and gave everybody dinner. I got some comics to give to children and later on adults were reading them.

"Can you imagine a dead city? You couldn't go anywhere or do anything. Purity Stores was very nice. They said people could come in and charge things.

She related that she lived in the trailer, which was on high land, for a month.

Mrs. Lowell compared the sights she saw to London after World War II bombing, which she also had seen. She added that "everybody was so nice, so kind to everybody."

Mrs. Lowell, Williams and Smoke came home by plane this week.

Muir Woods Thistles To Be Poisoned

Muir Woods Improvement Assn. will resort to poison to overcome a sticky problem, members decided at a meeting last night.

The problem is that of large thistles which abound in the Muir Woods area. The association decided to try an aminotriod poison on the thistles in the area of the clubhouse near Panoramic Highway. If it works there, the thistle war may be carried farther.

The association voted to ask the county to replace white lines on Panoramic Highway, many of which are scarcely visible, and to mark roads leading off the highway.

Further attack on the roadside litter problem was discussed. Margaret E. Wyman, secretary, said a work group from the club cleared litter from a portion of the highway before Christmas, but the problem continues. County help will be asked on this too.

Brown Names Gatov To Utilities Board

Albert W. Gatov of Kentfield, husband of Elizabeth Smith Gatov, was appointed today to the State Public Utilities Commission by Gov. Edmund G. Brown.

The appointment, subject to Senate confirmation, is for six years and carries an annual salary of $26,500.

Gatov will succeed Everett C. McKeage of San Anselmo, whose term expired.

"Albert Gatov has a thorough knowledge of state problems and is familiar with those vital areas of utilities and transportation governed by the commission," Brown said in a statement.

Gatov is a part owner-operator of domestic import distribution centers in California and Nevada. He is a former member of the Federal Maritime Board and former president of Pacific American Steamship Corp.

During World War II he served in the Army Transportation Corps, assigned to cargo and troop movements in the United States and the Persian Gulf Command.

OBITUARIES

William Leiser Dies At 66

William F. Leiser of Mill Valley, sports editor of the San Francisco Chronicle for 30 years, died today in a San Francisco hospital after an illness of four weeks. He was 66.

Leiser made his home at 77 Cascade Drive, Mill Valley, with his wife, Lyle Alice. He had been a Marin resident for 38 years and a resident of California for 45 years.

He was born in Kansas and was graduated from Stanford University Law School in 1921, after serving in the Army in World War I.

Leiser was editor of the Stanford Daily while attending the university. Immediately after graduation, he joined the San Francisco Examiner as a football writer, remaining there until he went to the Chronicle in 1934, where he replaced Harry B. Smith as sports editor.

He was a member of the San Francisco Press and Union League Club, the Olympic Club, the Family and the San Francisco-Oakland Newspaper Guild.

He leaves his wife, and a sister and two brothers, Mrs. Herbert Sutton of Mountain View, Edwin Leiser of Palo Alto and John Leiser of Salt Lake City.

Funeral will be at 1 p.m. Wednesday at Russell and Gooch Chapel in Mill Valley, where friends may call after 6 p.m. tomorrow. Burial will be in Golden Gate National Cemetery, San Bruno.

MRS. LETHBRIDGE

Mrs. Lucie V. Lethbridge, 55, a resident of San Rafael for 34 years before moving to Palm Springs in 1962, died yesterday in a San Francisco hospital of complications following heart surgery.

Mrs. Lethbridge entered the hospital shortly before Christmas and underwent surgery Jan. 5. She had been in frail health for several years with a heart ailment.

She and her husband, Walter H. Lethbridge, moved to Palm Springs following his retirement as wire chief for Pacific Telephone and Telegraph Co. in San Rafael.

Mrs. Lethbridge was born in San Francisco and came to San Rafael in 1924. During her long residence here she was active in Red Cross, Blood Bank, and in the San Rafael General Hospital Volunteers. She was a past president of Lagen Institute 52 of Young Ladies Institute.

Her husband survives, as do a daughter and two sons, Mrs. Carol A. Myrtue of Wheaton, Md.; Robert W. Lethbridge of Kentfield and James P. Lethbridge of San Rafael; her parents, Anthony Viera of Gualala, Mendocino County, and Mrs. Sadie Oliver of San Rafael; a sister and brother, Mrs. Anne McCormick of San Francisco and Lt. Cmdr. John J. Viera of Coronado, San Diego County, and seven grandchildren.

Requiem High Mass will be offered Tuesday at 9:30 a.m. at St. Raphael's Catholic Church in San Rafael, with the cortege forming at 9:15 a.m. at Keaton's Mortuary. Rosary will be recited at the mortuary at 8 p.m. Monday. Burial will be in Holy Cross Cemetery, Colma.

The family prefers that tributes be contributions to the Heart Fund.

Sausalitan Being Held As Suspect In Hit-Run

A Sausalito man was arrested early today, about three minutes after Sausalito police said his car ripped the side off a small foreign car, knocking the driver to the pavement.

Christopher Jonathan Graham, 21, of 1613 Bridgeway, was booked at Marin County Jail on a felony hit-run charge, and held on $1,100 bail.

The other driver, Robert Eugene Ostaggi, 22, of 21 Forest Lane, San Rafael, was treated at Marin General Hospital for an injury to his left knee.

Police said Graham's car struck Ostaggi's Volkswagen about 1:09 a.m. at Second and Richardson Streets. Graham drove away and was picked up by Patrolman Ben Barrett as he was pulling into the parking area at his apartment, about 1½ miles away.

The front license plate of the Graham car fell off at the time of impact and was found at the scene, police said. The car was badly damaged, but Graham was able to drive it. The vehicle was registered to F. A. Holmes at St. Helena, police said.

watched the plane as it lost altitude but said he did not think it was in difficulty.

Police theorized the pilot was trying to land in a vacant lot about a block square near where it crashed.

A policeman at Wichita State University said the plane flew over so low he felt he could almost reach up and touch it. He said the craft was spraying something that he first thought was water but later decided was jet fuel.

McConnell Air Force Base at Wichita said the plane was flying support to a B52 test mission. It apparently never gained altitude after taking off from the Boeing runway on the east edge of Wichita.

Streets ran curb full of water and foam and police, sheriff's deputies and National Guard units were called out to seal the area off to spectators.

It was not known how many of the homes were occupied at the time of the crash.

Firemen and rescue workers fought bitter 14-degree weather. Only the tail section of the plane was recognizable.

A witness said the tail of the craft appeared to be on fire as it roared down into the treetops and fuel streamed along behind it.

of the confusion, police said. Officers learned that employees armed themselves in self-defense with a knife, piece of pipe and a garbage can.

Hammock, Werst and Carrino were released on $276 bail each for appearence in Marin Municipal Court Tuesday.

Kluever, who could not provide bail, will appear in Court Monday. His brother, Kenneth Kluever, 21, of 720 B Street, San Rafael, is serving a 30-day sentence in the same jail for being drunk in a car.

Women Meeting On Club Plan

A special meeting of the Fairfax Women's Club has been called for 11:30 a.m. Tuesday to discuss the city's plan to take over operation of the clubhouse.

The city has leased the club to the women for 20 years, but wants now to operate it since council meetings are held there and other uses are contemplated.

Mrs. Paul Hammer of 156 Morningsun Drive, San Anselmo, and five others requested the special membership meeting.

Underground Lines Report Due Council

The schedule for undergrounding utility lines in Mill Valley's Locust business district will be reported on to the Mill Valley City Council at its 8 p.m. meeting Monday.

Councilmen will hear a report by Hal Schwartz on by-laws for the youth advisory committee on city streets and lanes from planning director Harvey Bragdon.

litical climate in Burundi as one of violent rivalry between old pro-Chinese "feudal" leaders of the Tutsi tribe and "Young Turks" of the Hutu tribe, trained in Western universities and opposed to the Red Chinese influence.

Officials in the government of Premier Moise Tshombe in the Congo claim that the rebellion in the northeast Congo was festered by Red Chinese diplomats in Burundi.

The Belgian source said King Mwambutsa IV of Burundi dismissed pro-Chinese Premier Albain Niyamwaya and replaced him with Ngendamdumwe, to fight the Chinese influence which threatened to topple his throne.

Ngendamdumwe was less than 30 years old. He was replaced about a year ago when the Tutsi faction temporarily won the upper hand in the country's politics.

Rwanda and Burundi, now two separate independent countries, were a single U.N. trusteeship run by Belgium until 1962. The two countries, especially Rwanda, have been torn for years by murderous tribal conflicts, pitting the minority tribe of tall Tutsis against the Hutu majority, who rebelled against the centuries-old Tutsi domination.

In Rwanda, the Hutus won control and the Tutsis fled to exile, mainly in Burundi. Their desire for a revenge against the more democratic Hutus is said to be encouraged by their racial brothers in Burundi.

Clothing, Camera Stolen From Home

Someone broke into the weekend home of Harold W. Cookson Jr. at 54 Seadrift Road, Stinson Beach, during the week and took clothing, blankets and a camera valued at $300.

Cookson, who lives in San Francisco, found the home broken into when he came out for the weekend last night. He said a small amount of jewelry may have been taken as well, but he would have to check his home in San Francisco before he knew whether it was missing.

Light Kills Bugs

COLLEGE STATION, Tex. (UPI) — U. S. Department of Agriculture scientists are experimenting with a method of insect control that uses flashes of light to kill pests. They have discovered that light flashes lasting less than one thousandth of a second cause cabbageworms to skip part of their life cycle. The worms' accelerated development puts them out of step with nature and results in early death. Unlike insecticides, the light flashes are not harmful to plants, the scientists report.

All-Out Disease War Set

Marin County will participate in a massive Bay Area immunization program against six serious diseases to be launched Jan. 26—but no immediate increase is planned in the number of immunization clinics now held in the county, said Dr. Carolyn B. Albrecht, county health officer, today.

Dr. Albrecht said the program, labelled SOS for "stamp out sickness," may create a big enough need that clinics will have to be increased eventually. The program is to be aimed primarily at educating the public to immunize against tetanus, diphtheria, whooping cough, measles, polio and smallpox, all preventable diseases.

Television programs, radio announcements and newspaper publicity are planned in seven Bay Area counties where immunization programs will be undertaken with federal funds under the Vaccination Assistance Act of 1962.

Dr. Albrecht said pamphlets will be mailed to Marin families describing the need for vaccination against the diseases. But she said Marin will take no federal money under the vaccination assistance act because it is limited to five-year-olds or younger and doesn't apply to smallpox and measles.

Sausalito School Tax Extension Election Called

Voters of Sausalito School District will be asked April 20 to extend the general tax rate of $2.25 per $100 assessed valuation for another three years.

District trustees decided Thursday night to put the extension on the April 20 ballot. The rate, effective through June, must be extended or it will drop back to 90 cents per $100.

Over-ride taxes and bond repayments are in addition to the statutory rate. For this year, Sausalito School District levied $2.23 of the total allowable $2.25 operating tax, but the district's rate totaled $2.27.

Trustees discussed a possible bond issue for new construction but took no action. They will discuss this at a later meeting, according to Supt. Marcus F. Davis.

Scientists 'Captives Of Work'

By WILLIAM E. HOWARD
Advance News Service

WASHINGTON — Rather belatedly some scientists are awakening to the reality of the times: They are largely captives, not masters of their trade.

This is the message to be read into a New Year's warning by a committee of the American Asso. for the Advancement of Science (AAAS) that political and social pressures are eating away the "integrity of Science."

The present situation is dangerous both to science and society," said the committee. The products of science—some with potentially harmful effects to the whole globe—are being pressed into use before the scientists are confident of the outcome.

There is no question that the committee, headed by Dr. Barry Commoner, chief botanist at St. Louis' Washington University, is sounding a legitimate alarm that everyone should heed.

But we can't go along with the committee's idea of a remedy—that better decisions will be made merely by stripping away secrecy to permit open discussion before large experiments or technological projects like landing men on the moon are undertaken.

Such discussion would be helpful, perhaps. But who would do it? Where are the scientists unprejudiced by their own special interests who could render impartial judgments?

Where, for that matter, was Commoner's group back in May of 1961 when the late President John F. Kennedy set the nation's sail toward the moon?

But even if Commoner did speak out then, its unlikely the public or the president would have given more weight to the opinions of a botanist than to a celebrated space scientist like Dr. Wernher Von Braun on the merits of such an expedition.

Commoner's committee is highly critical of that decision now, calling it an "essentially political" one which has significantly altered the pattern for scientific exploration of space. The implication is that Apollo altered things for the worse.

Actually, there is considerable evidence that the reverse is true. Manned spaceflight has sparked research into the physics of space—demanding accurate information on radiation, meteoroids and other conditions that scientists probably wouldn't have learned otherwise.

Moreover, spending on space science research — currently at 777 million dollars — has increased steadily over the years, although it is now facing a temporary pinch because of the moon program. But this is only a side issue.

The main problem, which Commoner's committee has ignored, is that the scientists themselves have assisted in the erosion of scientific integrity. They have eagerly embraced the government's increasingly generous support of research without a qualm.

Russ Blast Is Largest

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Atomic Energy Commission said today that an underground nuclear event in the Soviet Union yesterday was the largest recorded to date.

A spokesman refused to call it an explosion, but said if it were assumed to be an explosion it probably was in the low intermediate range of 20 to 200 kilotons.

A kiloton is the equivalent of the explosion of 1,000 tons of TNT. The atom bomb dropped on Hiroshima in World War II was about 20 kilotons.

Cause Of Death Called Natural

Merle Seibert, 58, of Benicia, died of natural causes after a Jan. 8 fall in his home, an autopsy ordered by William C. Bradley, Marin County assistant coroner, showed yesterday.

Seibert was transferred to Marin General Hospital from Vallejo General Hospital Wednesday and died Thursday of a subdural hemorrhage, the autopsy showed.

PERHAPS AUTOMATED SUPERMARKETS won't be using robot clerks, but experts say that the day is coming when you will shop in supermarkets without clerks or market baskets. Electronic devices will see that the merchandise is delivered to the home or car and bill the cost to your account. (AP Wirephoto)

MASTER KEY

Automated Markets

By ROGER LANE

NEW YORK (AP) — Imagine, housewives, shopping for your groceries in a supermarket without clerks, without market baskets and with all the products behind glass.

And with an electronic device to add up the bill and record charges in place of the usual checkout counter.

It's coming in perhaps five to 10 years the experts say. Forerunners already have appeared in France and Sweden.

"Of course, the ultimate step may be elimination of all supermarkets," said Herbert R. Brinberg, who as market research director of American Can Co. studies such possibilities.

"I mean it very seriously. If people become accustomed to buying without touching, there's no reason they couldn't get used to ordering by video telephone two or three times a week."

Brinberg sees an automated supermarket as working like this:

Products are arrayed in customary groupings — preserves, breakfast foods, and the like — behind a transparent partition dotted with key slots.

Choosing her brand of coffee, the shopper inserts the key into the slot in the partition, turns and withdraws it. Then she moves on to the soups, detergents and so on.

At the conclusion of her aisle-touring, she inserts the key into an electronic scanner, charge-reckoning and clearing device hooked into a computer that starts things moving in a warehousing zone of the store.

The arrangement presupposes that the housewife will be billed at the end of the month. Provision could be made for cash collection.

The shopper then elects whether to have her purchases delivered or bagged for loading into her car.

"The bulk of space in this type of store would be devoted to an automated warehouse. It would employ technologies now rapidly growing in use in commercial warehousing," Brinberg said in an interview.

These boil down to computer directed, mechanical means of discharging cans, packages and jars from storage bins into belts and chutes that collect the items at a delivery point.

Marin Women

MAKING UP at a rehearsal of "Rama and the Tigers" to be presented for Marin youngsters Saturday are, from left, Mrs. William A. Millen, makeup chairman, with Nedra Ruiz, a San Rafael High School student who will play the friendly monkey, and the director Marion Hayes Cain.

'Rama And The Tigers' Title Of Junior Theatre Production

"Rama and the Tigers," the second in the series of children's theater programs, sponsored by Junior Theatre of Marin, will be given Jan. 23 at the San Rafael High School auditorium at 10:30 a.m., and 2 p.m., Mrs. Douglas Pease of Kentfield, president, reported.

Produced and directed by Marion Hayes Cain of San Anselmo, founder of the Magic Circle Productions, the play is an imaginative story with all scenes laid in the jungle.

"We have three members of one family in the play: the Ralph Whites of Corte Madera. Ten year old Rocky White is the boy, Rama and his parents, Jody and Ralph White are the mother and father, Rudra and Yudo in the play. The jungle animals," Mrs. Cain said, "are members of the Teen Theatre." They are Geordie Arnold, Ted and Alex Herrmann, Bob Foster, Tim Morgan, Claire Stock, Nedra Ruiz and Bill Adams.

Season tickets for the remaining Junior Theatre productions may be purchased from Mrs. C. C. van Vliet, 1620 Sir Francis Drake Boulevard, Fairfax. Tickets may also be purchased at the door.

Stitching Improves Hanging Of Pleats

By EUNICE FARMER

"I stitch each knife-edge fold of pleated skirts very close to the edge on the wrong side of the skirt. Press these knife-edges smooth on the wrong side first. Then it is much easier to lay the pleats flat and space them correctly for pressing on the wrong side. (Continue this stitching through the hem of the skirt and your pleats will hang so much nicer without spreading out.)

Mrs. Willard Hayne, Silverton, Ore., has been awarded this week's Tailor Trix pressing board for this helpful suggestion.

I want to alter a man's sport coat. The sleeves and shoulder seams will be taken up at the shoulders. What will I have to do to make the sleeve fit and is this too big a job for an amateur?—Mrs. M.S.J.

Dear Mrs. M.S.J.:

If you are making the shoulder seams larger, the sleeve would be too large. You will have to make the two sleeve seams a little larger to compensate for this.

It is always tricky to alter men's clothes. If a professional tailor is available I would certainly advise paying him to do it, especially if you are inexperienced. As I always tell my pupils, men's clothes must be tailored perfectly. On them you simply can't "pin a rose over a boo-boo"! Fortunately for us gals, if something doesn't work out perfectly for us, we can use our creative talents and come up with some salvation. But men's clothes don't warrant this type of creative talent. In most cases, it would be better to save money on your own clothes and leave the men's clothes alone.

You wrote about lining cotton dresses, for the life of me, I can't understand why. I will have to admit, this seems to be the trend today, even in children's clothes, but I just ignore this and omit the lining.—Mrs. G.R.:

Dear Mrs. G.R.:

Many of our cottons are lined today because of the type of fabric we are using. Today many of the lighter weight fabrics are being used. Straight sheath-type dresses won't wrinkle quite as much if lined. Techniques are constantly changing because of our changing fashions. The A-line dresses require lining in order to retain the shape the designer intended.

You must learn to be your own judge; if you have shirt-waist dresses, or cottons that you will wear very casually, you probably wouldn't line them.

Also, most women have their good cottons cleaned instead of washing; this is long term economy because they will retain the brand new look that is so hard to achieve if we wash and iron the dresses ourselves. The sizing that is added is important and is often lost when garments are washed. Always take into consideration the type of dress you have made and the value you have attached to it and make your own decisions.

A few weeks ago you talked about making beautiful buttonholes in different colors and having the same colored buttons. Where do you find a pattern like this?—Mrs. D.E.

Dear Mrs. D.E.:

I was merely trying to tell you how creative you could be when you learn to make beautiful bound buttonholes. This is most attractive in the summer when you make a white or beige linen dress.

Use a pattern with buttonholes down the front or on the side or perhaps just on the bodice. Make colored buttonholes instead of using the same material that is in your dress. This is a most attractive variation and will give your dress a real "costume room look."

If you haven't sent for your free copy of my leaflet "Bound Buttonholes," do so today. Enclose a self-addressed, stamped envelope with your request and send to Eunice Farmer, in care of the Independent-Journal.

I had the misfortune to get a cigarette burn on my good velveteen dress. The pile is burned off and is very noticeable. Have you a solution?—Mrs. D.E.S.

Dear Mrs. D.E.S.:

You could make some small satin bows of the same color as your dress and scatter them on the skirt. You could scatter lace or sequin motifs.

Another idea is to make a dull satin rose as an accent. It all depends on the spot where the burn appears. However, I feel you could add some kind of trim as a camouflage.

THE 'LUNATIC LOOK'

The discotheque look was captured for the at-home scene this spring by designer John Weitz, who created this "lunatic pants" costume for his 1965 collection. Swing fringe is the keynote of the brilliant green, yellow, and shocking pink outfit. The fringe sways with every motion of the shocking pink hip-high pants. A green "tanker" style blouse completes the outfit, which was one of those shown in New York. (UPI Telephoto)

Lodge Installs Officers

Mrs. Nina Washburn was installed noble grand of Golden Star Rebekah Lodge 112 at 8 p.m. Thursday at the Odd Fellows Temple in San Rafael.

Mrs. Veryl Sanford, district deputy president and installing officer, was assisted by Mrs. Charles Peterson, deputy marshall.

Officers installed were Mesdames Kenneth Irwin, vice grand; Ralph Stephenson, recording secretary; C. W. Iverson, financial secretary; Clifford Winegarden, treasurer; Herbert Harmon, past noble grand; Herman Helperstein, conductor; Robert Wilby, warden; George Ashcraft, colorbearer; James Rowe, chaplain; Arthur Meyer, musician; and Robert Henderson, soloist.

Mrs. H. E. Wall was in charge of refreshments.

Mary Jones To Talk On Sex Guidance

Mrs. Mary K. Jones will speak on parents, the child and preschool sex guidance at Tuesday night's meeting of the Mill Valley Cooperative Nursery School. At 8:15 p.m. in Almonte Improvement Clubhouse.

Mrs Jones, who is director of Christian education for the Episcopal Diocese of California, will deal with the need for early guidance for children in understanding that part of life which deals with the origin of life, human relations, and other questions which young children bring to their parents.

Mrs. Jones holds a master's degree in child guidance from New York University.

Kappa Alumnae Plan Luncheon

Marin Alumnae of Kappa Gamma will hold a luncheon on Wednesday at noon at the home of Mrs. Benjamin R. Ostlind, San Rafael.

President Mrs. Joseph Barish of Greenbrae, will conduct a business meeting and the nominating committee will present the slate of new officers.

Beta Sigma Phi Chapter Aids Sports Club Project

Mrs. Ronald Lord, president of Upsilon Gamma Chapter of Beta sigma Phi in Novato, presented a check to Mrs. Robert Wakeman, president of the Good Sports Club Tuesday evening. The check for $100 will be used for the recent project of Indoor Sports. They have recently opened a home in Sonoma County for 15 members.

Upsilon Gamma Chapter voted to support the Indoor Sports Club last may as their service project when they found that funds for furnishings were needed for the resident home.

Susan Williams is Bride

St. Paul's Episcopal Church in San Rafael was the setting on Dec. 30 for the wedding of Susan Williams of Corte Madera and Daniel David Donnelly of San Rafael.

Lt. John W. Wilson III of San Rafael acted as best man.

A reception followed the ceremony at the Summit Drive home of the bride's parents in Corte Madera.

The bride, who was graduated from Redwood High School, is the sister of W. Stewart William III of Corte Madera and Samuel M. Williams of San Rafael.

The bridegroom, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Donnelly of Seattle, Wash., was graduated from Spokane High School and served in the U. S. Navy. He is employed with Marin Ambulance Service.

When Will 'In' People Learn Smoking Stinks?

THE MEMBERS OF MARIN'S Interagency Committee on Smoking and Health are facing a tough job.

As participants in the activities of such health agencies as the Heart Assn., the Cancer Society and the T.B. Assn., they are well aware of the long-range likelihood that continued smoking will ruin the good health of the smoker.

But smoking is "in" nowadays. It is equated with sophistication.

THE COMMITTEE MEMBERS must at times feel like loyal W.C.T.U. supporters in the late 1920s and early 30s. They must feel they are battling a relentless tide against them.

On every hand there is pressure for smoking. TV commercials extoll the benefits of it. So do the beautiful color ads in the slick magazines and in the Sunday rotogravure sections.

Offering a cigarette has come to be considered a warm, friendly gesture.

Clergymen smoke. Doctors smoke. Teachers smoke. Sunday school teachers smoke. Mothers smoke. Fathers smoke. Sisters and brothers smoke. And, according to TV commercials and magazine ads, romance is somehow encouraged as sweethearts smoke.

HOW, IN THIS atmosphere, can the Marin Interagency Committee on Smoking and Health hope to accomplish anything constructive?

More than 300 years ago John Milton wrote (in his "Areopagitica"), "Let her and Falsehood grapple, who ever knew Truth put to the worse in a free and open encounter."

Since the committee has Truth on its side—along with reason and the facts—the Committee could fail to win the final decision only by quitting too soon.

WHAT IS THE TRUTH which the Committee can depend upon as the weapon that assures ultimate success?

The Truth is that scientific investigation, verified by the top health authorities of the national government, have found cigarette smoking in particular and tobacco use in general to be harmful to health.

The association between cigarettes and respiratory cancer has been dramatically shown for everyone to see in authoritative governmental health reports.

ACTUALLY, DOCTORS WHO are most acutely aware of the health hazards of smoking show one of the largest ratios of individuals who have disciplined themselves to break the smoking habit.

Weaklings continue to smoke. Only the strong can kick the habit. How can smoking really be "in" under such circumstances?

Borrowing some of the favorite terminology of the sophisticate (more accurately, the psuedo-sophisticate), smoking is evidence of emotional immaturity.

Goldwater Deserves Credit For Recognizing His Defeat

This is the full meaning of the actions the Republican leaders have taken since the havoc of Nov. 3.

NOT A BLOW was struck in public. Not a drop of blood is visible on the floor. There will be no divisive voting when the National Committee meets in Chicago Jan. 22.

That's the way the Republicans like it.

Sen. Barry M. Goldwater himself helped to do it that way. He couldn't lick the GOP moderates, so he joined them in dumping his own appointee, Dean Burch, as national chairman. Goldwater managed the neat feat of stepping down gracefully — while being pushed.

BECAUSE HE could have fought back against the ouster of Burch and the muting of his own party influence—thereby dividing the GOP badly—Goldwater deserves credit for knowing when he was defeated and acting accordingly.

He has shown that his first loyalty is to the Republican Party, not to extreme conservatism.

The evidence that Goldwater has lost his control of the Republican Party and that the moderates have taken control rests on more than the anti-Burch revolt.

THE MAIN party decisions since the election have been made by the GOP moderates —like these:

The Republican Governors' Asso. was created to give the moderates a stronger voice. It did.

Two moderates—Rep. Gerald Ford of Michigan and Rep. Peter Frelinghuysen of New Jersey—took over the Republican leadership in the House.

Senate Minority Leader Everett Dirksen is moving to the center of the party and the Senate Republicans retained the liberal Thomas Kuchel as Senate whip.

THE MODERATES forced the resignation of Burch and the choice of Ray Bliss of Ohio as National Chairman. Goldwater smiply conceded what he couldn't avert.

Goldwater has put the best face on his defeat. He did this by embracing the opposition's candidate for Burch's successor. Thus he avoided the anti-Burch vote at the Chicago meeting.

The measure of Goldwater's defeat comes from his own words. When the anti-Burch push started, Goldwater said that Burch must stay. He served notice on the party that the ouster of Burch must be seen as nothing less than a repudiation of Goldwater himself.

NOW GOLDWATER has yielded to the removal of Burch without a showdown vote. Therefore, by his own definition he has accepted it as a repudiation of his own status as party leader.

But I believe Goldwater overstated it. The Republican moderates have repudiated Goldwater as the dominant voice of the party, but have not repudiated him as a partner in the collective voice of the party.

There is a difference. The difference is that the moderates will now be quarterbacking, not Goldwater. But they want Goldwater on the team.

THE WAY Bliss played his part in helping bring this about shows why he is the ideal choice at this time. He said he would be chairman only if Goldwater asked him. This made it possible for Goldwater to appear to be helping to choose him and enables Bliss to take the post under nearly perfect conditions; that is, without a fight and with enough blessing from Goldwater to give Bliss the maximum support of the GOP right wing.

WHAT OUR READERS SAY

Economic View Is Questioned

Editor, Independent-Journal:

If I understand you correctly, you have suggested in the "Editor's Notebook" of Jan. 2 that government disaster relief money be granted to those people who agree to do as the government tells them, and denied to those whose land is coveted for public parks and recreational areas.

This is the approach to which conservatives refer when they say that economic control is all the government needs to make a dictatorship out of a democracy.

Mr. Hennington 'Swatting Flies'

Editor, Independent-Journal:

I, for one, have had a belly full of Mr. James Hennington of Fairfax. For one who with never ending pride, points out his love of country, his concern at keeping "our way of life" and Constitution and a lot of other rosy but meaningless hogwash, he is quick to use his constitutional rights to free speech in slandering anyone who doesn't happen to see eye to eye with him.

Every letter that I have read, by him, has been liberally splattered with such phrases as "Communist front," "Communists," "traitors," "subversives," etc., and to lend credibility to the whole mass, a few like "evidence," "proven" and "record." Shades of Senator McCarthy and the John Birch Society!

I realize that I am overly bold to suggest that rather than becoming obsessed with the problem of Communist agents hiding in our bathrooms, Mr. Hennington and his so-called "ultra-patriotic" associates (whether in body or in spirit) might take a genuine interest in the welfare of America by recognizing that communism, anywhere, breeds where social and/or political injusties and inequities exist. Malaria wasn't licked by some nut running around squashing every mosquito in sight, as dedicated as such behavior might seem. Communism is similar since it, too, requires "positive" action and even more important, "positive" thinking. All of the loyalty oaths, HUACs (House Un-American Activities Committee) and witch hunts in this world aren't going to ferret out the hard-core, die-hard communist agents now in America. However, when the day arrives that all Americans have the real and lasting opportunity to enjoy all of the rights guaranteed them by the Constitution, regardles of race, color, national origin or state of residency (that means Mississippi, too), then the successes of the Communist organizers and agitators, in the U.S. at least, will take on the proportions of those of a Lipton's tea salesman in China.

Put down your flyswatter, Mr. Hennington, and exert your efforts where they will do a bit of good.

Make Every Vehicle Insured

Editor, Independent-Journal:

Regarding your front-page article on proposed Compulsory Insurance (Carrell), I would like to suggest that the initial cost of this insurance be incorporated in the license fee by the State of California, thus making every vehicle in this state an insured one.

Irresponsible drivers, as Mr. Carrell refers to, can be dealt with by other means, without further penalizing the driving public by excessive and perpetually escalating liability costs.

C. G. AUSTIN

Oldsters Need Driving Tests

Editor, Independent-Journal:

Danny Davis (a young truck driver) heading south on Highway 101, came over the Greenbrae overpass. A Lincoln Continental was in the express lane that takes off Sir Francis Drake Boulevard southbound on 101. The Lincoln was a little ahead of the truck and going much slower.

Alert to the possibilities of the situation, the truck driver immediately applied his brakes and his horn. His worst fears were realized. The other car just kept going at the same speed, not speeding up or slowing.

Only by prompt action on the part of the truck driver was a serious accident averted. He was able to stop his vehicle in time.

Badly shaken, he followed the other driver to the Mill Valley turnoff and observed her antics en route. He watched her proceed in the right-hand lane for a short distance, then move into the center lane, then turn on the directional sign, then turn to look back. The directional signal was then left on until she turned off at Mill Valley.

Danny . . . followed her home and questioned her to find out why she had not heeded the blaring horn. She heard it, she said, but thought she had the right of way. "I am 84 years old and have been driving for 57 years," she told the truck driver. . . .

No one likes to be mean to old people, but for their own protection, they should have driving tests.

Belvedere City Council Correct

Editor, Independent-Journal:

I believe the members of the Belvedere City Council are quite correct in suggesting that the City of Belvedere not annex to the Tiburon Sanitary District. They are also correct in stating that they should not contribute to any solution of the problems of the Tiburon Peninsula. Belvedere's contribution of its sewage is enough.

May I suggest the building of a sewage plant at Belvedere Point. A plant designed as a Grecian temple (Corinthian columns?) would be most esthetically pleasing to those of us in the Tiburon hills. It would make an appealing landfall for mariners returning to the Belvedere Cove. A visit to the plant by the children of the Reed School District studying science or Greek civilization could serve as a culminating activity.

Lastiy, local control is the best way to solve Belvedere's sewage problem.

BARKER ON CHINA

Peking-Jakarta Axis Looks Pretty Shaky

By GEORGE BARKER

CHINA AND Indonesia are united today by a common hatred of the jerry-built state of Malaysia. Both countries feel Malaysia should be a part of their overseas domain.

It is not difficult to see Malaysia as a device to control the Chinese, and the Chinese aren't stupid — they know it. For years a merger of Singapore and the Malay Federation was deemed inadvisable because it was thought that as a result the Chinese would numerically and otherwise dominate the Malay population of the fused territories. But by adding the British possessions in North Borneo to the merger Britain thought she would add enough non-Chinese ethnic groups to offset Chinese dominance. This merger proved acceptable to most of Malaysia, but not to a large Peking-minded minority of Chinese in Singapore and North Borneo. Neither did it satisfy Sukarno. Most of Borneo belongs to Indonesia and he thought it should all be his.

THE CHINESE in Malaysia are divided into two groups. One group is very left in its views, very vociferous, very active, very humorless and narrow-minded and forceful, very Maoist, and knows what it wants and intends to achieve its objectives by fair means or foul, regardless of what the others may think. The other group is immensely larger, but it lacks cohesion and the people in it merely want to be left alone to carry on their normal lives. Since it has no strong political convictions, not only does this group not speak out, but it passively follows the line of least resistance and often supports the other group when asked to do so.

Any alliance between Jakarta and Peking is bound to be a shaky affair. The Sukarno government was taking repressive measures against Indonesian Chinese just five years ago, closing Chinese language schools and newspapers, and forcing alien Chinese out of business in rural Indonesia. At that time, numbers of Chinese went to Hong Kong, Red China or Singapore from Indonesia.

THE MALAY, in general, is easy-going, even a bit lazy, and is at a disadvantage with the aggressive, industrious Chinese. The Chinese tend to keep to themselves, a sort of introverted society. All of this leads to a kind of mutual distrust, which borders on race hatred. Add to this the conflicting religious beliefs of Buddhism - Taoism held by most Chinese and the Islam of the Malays, and the picture of discontent is complete. Let the Chinese begin sending technicians and advisers to Jakarta and I can predict this animosity will grow.

Sukarno has always been fawned on and flattered by the Chinese. Peking probably has been courting him with an eye on the rich resources of Indonesia which have been allowed to go to pot since the reluctant departure of the Dutch.

SUKARNO IS QUITE ill with dropsy. A kidney operation he had recently in Vienna was reportedly unsuccessful. He is probably trying to regain his tarnished glory before he dies. Like many revolutionaries, he knows how to fight, but is a very poor administrator. But in lining up with Peking, he may be trading in his country. Only time will tell.

Culture For The Youngsters

Culture and art-conscious Marin has not forgotten its younger generation.

Performances of the Junior Theatre of Marin serve as an introduction to the arts and dramas for youngsters, and at the same time give the children a sense of belonging to a family and their group of friends as they enjoy the plays together.

A marionette show launched the 23rd annual Winter Series. Four more performances are coming up. All are on Saturdays, at 10:30 a.m. and at 2 p.m., in the San Rafael High School Auditorium.

The dates to remember: Jan 23 — "Rama and the Tigers"; Feb. 6—"The Gold Hat"; March 13—"Toad of Toad Hall"; and April 24—"Magic in Bannerland."

Low admission prices, unchanged in 23 years, should be an added inducement. County chairman of the Junior Theatre is Mrs. Douglas Pease of Kentfield.

The fare provided by this talented group is ideal for pure entertainment and for cementing family ties.

Bouquets And (No) Brickbats

A BOUQUET to Francis T. Fogarty, retiring manager of J. C. Penney Co., for his long service to the business community and to civic improvement.

A BOUQUET to Maj. Gen. C. F. Necrason, commander of the 28th Air Division at Hamilton Air Force Base, on his coming retirement. After 29 years in the service, he plans to retire in March.

A BOUQUET to Supt. Edward C. Pino of Reed School District for completing his doctorate with a dissertation on "an experimental socio-psychological study in communication designed to measure the effect of structured messages on the attitude of parents toward public schools."

HARM CHILDREN

This information was contained in a folder put out by the Children's Hospital Medical Center in Boston.

The pamphlet, entitled "How to Prevent Childhood Poisoning . . . a New Approach," asserts that the high incident rate of poisoning of children by baby aspirin is explained by the fact that it's candy-flavored.

It also says that "lead paint tastes like candy and is poisonous if swallowed in small doses over a long period."

It would require more than a brief folder to focus attention on all the ways that a child's heart, mind and soul can be contaminated.

Do what you can to protect young people against such dangers. Better still, provide them with sound religious training, healthy education and wholesome entertainment.

"Woe to the world because of scandals!"
(Matthew 18:7)

May I be a source of inspiration to children, O Jesus, never a cause of harm.

Johnson's Inaugural Will Be Costliest In History

Lavish Parties, Dancing At Three Locations Set

By LOUIS CASSELS

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Lyndon Baines Johnson, a just-folks Texan who turns out lights to save money, will begin a full term as President this week at the most lavish and expensive inaugural ceremonies in U.S. history.

The event, which Johnson calls "the swearing," will be a three-day extravaganza combining the best — and worst — features of a coronation, a circus, and a political convention.

The festivities will commence Monday and reach their climax at noon EST Wednesday when Johnson will place his hand on a Bible and repeat the 39-word oath prescribed by Article II of the Constitution for the installation of a Chief Executive.

Before and after the official events there will be a mad round of parties, ranging from intimate cocktail gatherings in hotel suites to the formal inaugural ball which will be held simultaneously in three hotel ballrooms and the National Guard armory.

The cost is estimated by the inaugural committee at $2.1 million — a record sum and about $500,000 more than was spent on John F. Kennedy's inaugural in 1961. Congress put up $500,000 out of tax funds to pay for erecting stands and other costs of the official swearing-in ceremony in the plaza of the Capitol. The remaining $1.6 million has been underwritten by big national corporations and local business firms. Most if not all of it will be repaid out of the inaugural committee's receipts from ticket and souveir sales.

Not included in the $2.1 million are the hefty sums that individuals will spend on hotel rooms, meals, entertainment, transportation, new clothes and hairdos. Officials are confidently predicting "the biggest inaugural crowd of all times," which means about 50,000 people coming far enough to need hotel rooms, and perhaps 10 times that many arriving from nearby points in time for the big show.

Millions of other Americans will watch the proceedings on television, which is not only cheaper but likely to be much more comfortable. Washington's ever-unpredictable weather has a habit of turning especially nasty on inauguration days. A howling blizzard buried the city under eight inches of snow on the eve of President Kennedy's inaugural. And the weather was so bad the day William Henry Harrison took the oath that he caught pneumonia and died after only a month in office.

The actual ceremony will take only an hour. Chief Justice Earl Warren will administer the oath to Johnson on a pine-board platform erected on the south steps of the Capitol. Following the oath, the President will deliver his inaugural address.

Hubert H. Humphrey of Minnesota will be sworn in as vice president with Speaker John W. McCormack, D-Mass., doing the honors. Leontyne Price and the Mormon Tabernacle Choir will sing, and four clergymen will pray. Mindful of the marathon prayer offered in 1961 by Richard Cardinal Cushing of Boston, inaugural officials this time have fixed definite time limits for all participants, including the four clergymen.

The Capitol ceremony will begin at 11:30 a.m. EST, so that Johnson can take his oath precisely at noon — the hour fixed by the Constitution for the beginning of a new presidential term.

The swearing-in will be followed by the inaugural parade down historic Pennsylvania Avenue to the White House. Bleachers have been erected on sidewalks along the route, with seats selling for $3.50 to $25 Depending on location. People in the less expensive seats will probably see far less of the parade than home TV viewers — but they can always say they were there.

There were 33,000 marchers in the Kennedy inaugural parade, and it ran far past sundown. This year, inaugural committee chairman Dale Miller has imposed a rigid ceiling of 15,000 marchers, and vows that the whole thing will be over in two and a half hours.

Rude shocks may be in store for some of the 200,000 people who received "invitations" to the inaugural. Miller explained that these documents "were really intended only as souvenirs" and will not admit anyone to any particular inaugural activity. They were accompanied by a mimeographed sheet which stated this fact, and which told the "invitee" where to apply, and how much money to send, for tickets to such events as the parade.

But not everyone reads the fine print, so the ushers doubtless will have to cope with a number of outraged citizens who feel that they have a personal invitation from the President to see him take the oath.

Admission to the official inaugural ceremony at the Capitol requires a special kind of ticket, for which there is no charge, but which is very hard to come by. There is space for only about 5,000 persons in Capitol Plaza, and the available tickets have been distributed through senators, representatives, the Democratic National Committee and the White House.

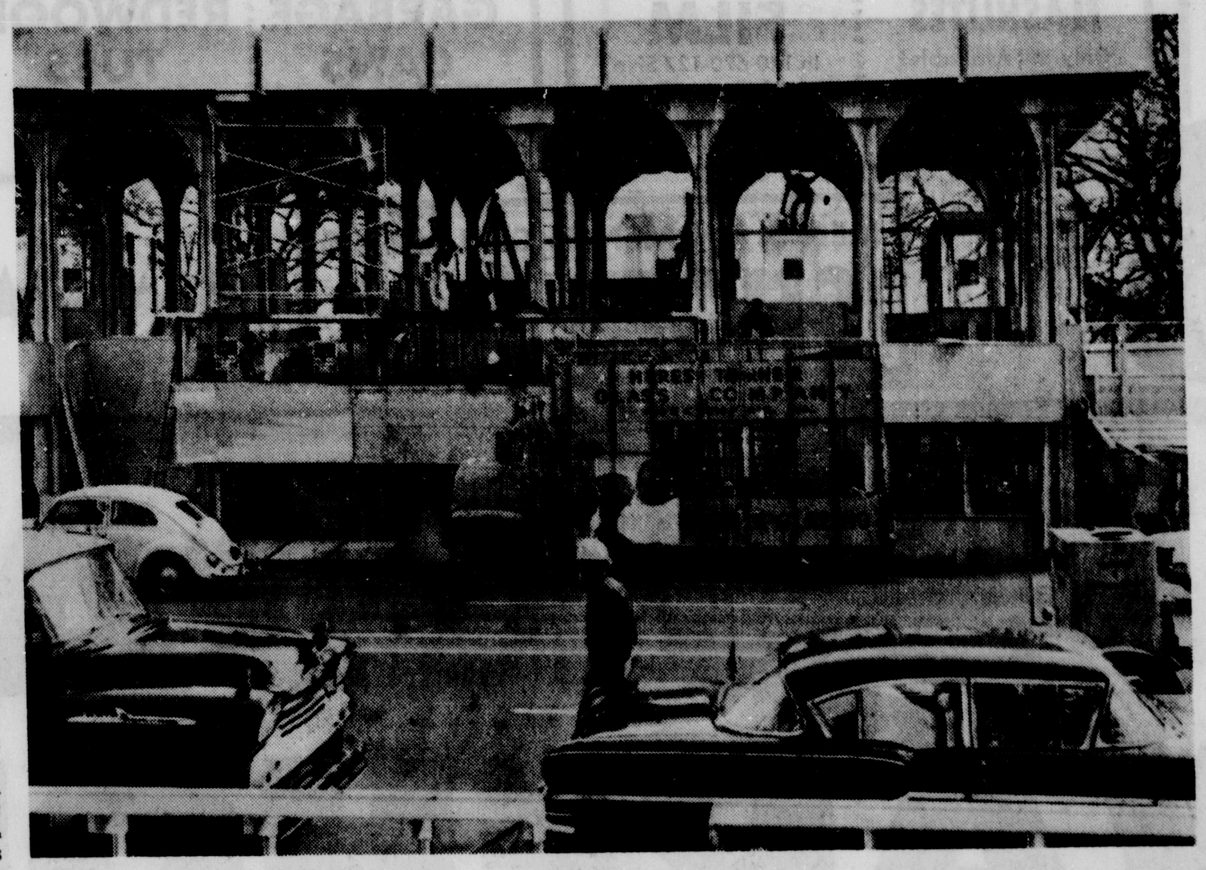
Also free, but only to those who have received special cards of admission, is the "gala" which will be sponsored by the Democratic National Committee in the armory on Monday night. The gala is a slightly chaotic variety show featuring big-name entertainers who are willing to perform free in return for the publicity or prestige.

Tickets to the inaugural ball cost $50 a couple, and are sold only to persons who have received a special invitation not the general "y'all come" invitation mailed out by the inaugural committee. A capacity turnout of 25,000 celebrants is expected at the four section party. Music will be provided by no less than 14 orchestras, including those of Louis Armstrong, Meyer Davis, Guy Lombardo, Lester Lanin and Peter Duchin, plus the Army, Navy, Air Force and Marine bands.

Inaugural balls used to be white-tie affairs, but Johnson has let it be known that he will wear a dinner jacket and black tie. His example will be emulated by virtually all of the male guests, since it is poor protocol and worse politics to outdress the guest of honor. But Lady Bird Johnson is having a special ball gown run up for her by a New York designer — which gives the ladies their cue to dress as elegantly and expensively as they please.

The swearing-in, the parade, the gala and the ball are the highlights. But the three-day program features many other events, including receptions for visiting governors and "distinguished ladies," a dance for young Democrats, a party in honor of Vice President and Mrs. Humphrey, and an inaugural concert at Constitution Hall.

Before the Capitol ceremony on Wednesday, Johnson and Humphrey are expected to attend a worship service at St. John's Episcopal Church near the White House. It will be cosponsored by the Protestant Council of Churches and the Roman Catholic Archdiocese of Washington — the first such joint inaugural prayer service in the nation's history.



GETTING READY—Workmen put the finishing touches on the presidential reviewing stand in Washington, D.C., for Lyndon B. Johnson's inaugural next Wednesday. In the section where the president will stand (section above the motor of the truck where man in light-colored hat is working) bullet-proof glass will be installed. (UPI Telephoto)

Pending Ousters From Organization Group Ires Many

Unruh Keeping Mum On Choices For 'Stacked' Assembly Group

By EDWIN S. CAPPS

SACRAMENTO (CNS) — Several members of the State Assembly are a bit disgruntled about firm rumors that they will be ousted from the membership of the house's government organization committee for the coming session.

Assembly Speaker Jesse M. Unruh (D-Inglewood), who has the sole authority for naming members and chairmen of Assembly committees, isn't expected to announce the roster of chairmen and members until late this month.

However, rumors get around as the various members are interviewed as to their likes and dislikes as far as committee service is concerned.

The word, at this point, is that a number of former members of the government organization committee are being deposed. Further, the word is that the committee is being "stacked"—filled with members who can be counted upon to vote exactly as the speaker wants them.

The government operations committee, headed by the only Republican chairman, Assemblyman Milton Marks (R-San Francisco), will have an important agenda, including liquor licenses and many items affecting small businesses which are regulated by the state government.

But perhaps one of the main subjects to come before the committee this session is that of creation of a new revenue department. The state's "Little Hoover" commission has recommended a department with a director appointed by the governor, succeeding to most of the powers and duties of the State Board of Equalization.

Under the Little Hoover plan, inheritance tax appraisers would continue to be appointed by the state controller but would work with reduced fees (some now make more than $50,000 a year from their part-time duties).

Speaker Unruh and State Controller Alan Cranston, who has appointed nearly all, if not all, of the present inheritance tax appraisers, are on opposite sides of the Democratic political fence. During Cranston's unsuccessful campaign for the Democratic nomination for U.S. Senate last spring, the question of the inheritance tax appraisers became a prime issue.

It was charged that the appraisers formed a powerful political arm for Cranston and that they were being required to make heavy financial contributions to his campaign fund, as well as being called upon to do work in behalf of his candidacy.

Some charged that Unruh was at the bottom of raising the inheritance tax appraiser issue. While Unruh denied this, he did say he felt the present system of permitting the controller to appoint the appraisers could lead to more corruption than anything in state government at present.

Only last week, Unruh was asked in a weekly television interview for his views on the appraisers. He said his position had been made clear last spring but invited reporters to look over the makeup of the appraiser cadre throughout the state to see how many held important offices in the Democratic organization.

It becomes apparent then that Unruh might have a strong interest in any bills having to do with a new revenue department and how much power the state controller would retain or lose under such legislation.

Following the primary election campaign last year, and during it, too, members of both parties in the Legislature pledged to seek reforms from the present method by which the appraisers are appointed by the controller. Some said they should be placed under civil service and work for the board of equalization.

The Little Hoover commission proposal would retain appraisers as appointees of the controller but would limit their fees on large estates substantially, with more of the automatic work being done by county officials and much of the fee going to the counties.

This Week In The World

U.S. Silent On Laos Bombings

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

The State Department was uneasily silent at week's end as details emerged of secret U.S. bombing raids against Communist supply routes in officially-neutral Laos.

The sorties had been carried out over a period of months. First news of the American raids came when two U.S. fighter-bombers were shot down during a strike against a Red military base near the town of Ban Ban, 40 miles west of the North Vietnamese border.

The United States reportedly also had backed South Vietnamese air strikes against North Vietnamese military targets although the State Department denied U.S. planes or pilots participated in the raids or flew cover over North Vietnamese territory.

While the government was keeping quiet on Laos, the president was announcing first steps toward his "Great Society" in a loud clear voice.

At the top of his list was education. In a special message to Congress, Johnson asked for 1.5 billion dollars to finance his aid-to-education program.

The president also asked Congress to adopt new immigration legislation that would abolish the present quota system based on national origins.

Johnson managed to combine his foreign aid request with his much-publicized economy campaign and asked for the lowest budget in the project's 18-year history—3.4 billion dollars.

A fourth major legislative request to Congress during the week asked for 55 million dollars for work on disarmament and curbs on the spread of nuclear weapons.

Around The World Around The Week

Phoenix—Republican National Chairman Dean Burch announced he will resign the post April 1. Taking over the powerful post with the belated blessing of defeated Republican candidate for the presidency, Barry Goldwater is Ohio GOP Chairman Ray C. Bliss.

New York—Longshoremen from Maine to Texas walked off the docks in spite of protests from union leaders that they had just negotiated the finest contract for the longshoremen in history.

Washington—The National Interagency Council on Smoking and health predicted that at least 125,000 Americans will die this year from the effects of cigarette smoking. The council called it "a national catastrophe" but Americans went on smoking.

How Well Do You Know Judges? They're Trying For Better Image

(EDITOR'S NOTE: What legal authorities regard as one of the nation's most pressing needs is judicial reform—the choosing of highly qualified judges dedicated to unbiased enforcement of the laws. What is being done about the issue is discussed in the following dispatch by UPI's U.S. Supreme Court reporter.)

By CHARLOTTE G. MOULTON

WASHINGTON (UPI) — If a legal problem took you to a court in your state, would you have confidence in the judge who would handle the case?

Do you know the name of your local judges? Or even of your state Supreme Court justices? How did they get their jobs? Did you vote for or against them? Were they appointed by the governor? Or perhaps the state legislature?

If you can answer these questions, you are a most unusual citizen. And that is why thousands of the nation's lawyers and jurists are banding together to improve the public image of judges who represent the third branch—the judiciary—of the government.

The American ideal of "equal justice under law" is personified by a judge in his black robe. He is supposed to embody right and decency and, of necessity, scholarly learning. But well-informed critics are saying that all too often the facts don't fit the image.

Samuel T. Rosenman of New York, a former judge and adviser to Democratic presidents, said in a recent speech:

"Let us face this sad fact: That in many — in fact too many—instances, the benches of our courts in the United States are occupied by mediocrities — men of small talent, undistinguished in performance, technically deficient and inept."

This view is supported by Herbert V. Brownell, U. S. attorney general in the Eisenhower administration. Brownell said in a recent magazine article that all too often a judge gets his job as a reward for political loyalty and looks on the court house as "a cozy rest home."

"It is perhaps no exaggeration to say that over the long haul mediocrity in the courts will not provide justice," he wrote.

Some authorities cite obsolete state constitutions as a basic reason for lack of excellence in state courts.

In 19 states some or all jurists run for office on a partisan-political ballot. In 16 states they run on a non-partisan ballot. In nine states and Puerto Rico they are appointed by the chief executive, with confirmation by a legislative or other body.

In Rhode Island, North Carolina, Vermont, and Virginia, the state legislature appoints the judges.

Election of judges drew this comment from Rosenman:

"The idea that the voters themselves select their judges is something of a farce. The real electors are a few political leaders who do the nominating . . . policital leaders nominate practically whom they choose."

Rosenman recalled that after the 1954 election a poll of voters was taken in New York City, Buffalo, and semi-rural Cayuga County. The poll showed that not more than one per cent of the New York City voters could remember the name of the man just elected chief judge of the highest court in the state. In Buffalo not a single voter polled could recall the name, and in Cayuga County, only one per cent.

The American Judicature Society, a group of more than 20,000 lawyers, judges and laymen dedicated to improving administration of justice, has been urging an appointive - effective plan of judicial selection since 1913. Missouri finally adopted it in 1940 for its Supreme Court, Appellate Court, and some trial judges.

Now some form of the plan also is in effect in California, Oklahoma, Alabama, Alaska, Kansas, Iowa, Nebraska and Illinois.

The so-called Missouri plan provides for:

—Review of the appointments by the voters after a short probationary term, with the only question whether a judge's record justifies his continuing in office.

Persistent effort of the Judicature Society as well as by a committee headed by Associate Supreme Court Justice Tom C. Clark, plus enactment of the plan in 1962 by Iowa and Nebraska for all state judges, has sparked a judicial reform boom in other states.

As legislatures convene this year, proposals for changes in judncial selection are ready in Colorado, Ohio, Kansas, New Mexico, Florida, North Dakota, New York, Indiana, Pennsylvania, and Oklahoma.

Speaking recently at a conference in Indiana where he pleaded for a reorganization of the state's judicial system, Clark said:

"Beginning with Andrew Jackson's time, many have looked upon the e-l-e-c-t-i-o-n of judges as a sacred right of the people. I would agree that the s-e-l-e-c-t-i-o-n of judges is sacred . . .

"A judge's responsibility does not end with the decision of cases. . .in his community he represents the entire judiciary.

"He is 'the judge' 24 hours of each day—every day — whether sitting on the bench, walking along the street, on the golf course or at home. By his conduct he sets the standard of justice for his community . . . people . . . judge the law by what they see and hear of the judge."

For Marin, the world's fastest reporting

We tied up the globe in the I-J's new electronic tape to show there's something new in the world of news reporting in your daily I-J.

For that tape "speaks" a new electronic language which we take directly from the Associated Press sports wire, rather than news in the form of teletyped copy.

We feed this tape into a battery of new Elektron linotypes which "read" the little perforations and change impulses into words, set in metal. All at speeds Buck Rogers never dreamed of.

Result: MORE NEWS in less time and LATER NEWS . . . giving you a sports section with more depth and complete world coverage.

These electronic speed demons also enable us to bring you the closing prices of our New York Stock List TODAY, instead of tomorrow. And to print the entire weekly range of ALL New York stocks in our Saturday edition.

Just another way of advancing the I-J to further your reading enjoyment.

Tempers Flare; Marin Wins 13th!

College of Marin basketballers hope things will be calmer tonight than they were last night in Santa Rosa.

The Mariners beat Santa Rosa Junior College 94-77 last night in a game that was much closer than the score indicates. It was a rough game that saw two scuffles almost turn into free-for-alls on the Bear Cubs' court.

With their 13th straight victory behind them, the Tars will host Sierra College tonight at 8 o'clock in Kentfield. Marin, by beating Santa Rosa, took over first place in the Golden Valley Conference with a 2-0 record, Santa Rosa is 2-1.

The two Tars that engaged in brief scuffles were guards Jay Johnson and Brad Busch. Santa Rosa made a mistake by getting those two boys mad, as Busch scored 33 points and Johnson tallied 28. Santa Rosa's Tom Stewart was the game's top scorer with 34 points.

When Johnson and Santa Rosa's Mike Francis had a shoving match, both benches emptied but order was restored before things got out of hand.

Santa Rosa jumped out to a 10-8 lead but the Mariners tied it up 14-14. Busch was instrumental in keeping the Tars in the game, hitting five of the first seven buckets recorded by Marin. By intermission, the Tars had a 42-37 lead.

In the second half, Santa Rosa got to within two points of Marin, but then the Tars got hot and pulled away by 10. Marin maintained a substantial lead throughout the final part of the second half.

"I was really pleased with the way our kids hung in there tough. Since Sierra had a bye tonight (Friday) we'll have to really bounce to beat them tomorrow," said Tars coach Cal Riemcke.

"Boy, that was really a tough game," he continued. "It looks more like we've been in a football game."

The last time Marin lost a game in Santa Rosa was back in 1958. The triumph gave the Tars an overall record of 15 wins and 2 losses.

Marin: Fred Arnold, 3-4-10; Pete Coy, 1-0-2; Bill Brody, 4-0-8; Rod Monti, 1-0-2; Jim Halm, 3-5-11; Jay Johnson, 9-10-28; Brad Busch, 12-9-33. Totals: 33-28—94.

Redwood, Marin Catholic Score League Victories

Giants Blast Trojans, 63-45; Meyer Is Star

Redwood High School's cagers thumped Terra Linda 63-45 yesterday at Terra Linda High in a Marin Athletic League game.

The Giants started off with a 17-7 lead after the first quarter and stretched it to 36-18 by halftime. The Redwood quintet was much hotter than when it lost to Drake last Tuesday, the Giants hitting 45 per cent (25 of 56) from the floor last night.

Terra Linda tried a full press on Redwood at the start of the game but it backfired as the Redwood boys found holes in the Trojans' defense.

Chuck Meyer, the 6-4 Redwood center, had a big night of it, hitting 6 of 7 shots from the floor and leading his team in rebounds with 12 off the boards. Guard Charlie Davis hit 8 of 8 free tosses for the winners.

PRIME FACTORS

Coach Dick Hart credited his balanced scoring and rebounding as the prime factors for the triumph. The Giants, paced by Davis' 14 points, had four boys in double figures for the night. Meyer and Don Detrick each had 13 and Tom Bly hit for 10 points. Detrick also had 9 rebounds to his credit.

Redwood	17	19	14	13—63

Redwood scorers: Don Detrick, 6-1-13; Tom Bly, 4-2-10; Bruce McGee, 4-0-8; Bob Green, 0-1-1; Chuck Meyer, 6-1-13; Charlie Davis, 3-8-14; Russ Smith, 2-0-4. Totals 25-13—63.

Terra Linda scorers: Brian Perron, 1-1-3; Dick Clark, 0-1-1; Craig Hill, 2-0-4; Rick Edwards, 2-0-4; Keith Shields, 4-0-8; Bob Lemmelet, 4-0-8; John Ahern, 0-1-1; Kraig Kilby, 1-0-2; Mike Ainslie, 0-3-3; Fred Daniele, 2-0-4; Jim Crisp, 1-0-2; Don Knotts, 2-1-5. Totals 19-7—45.

Wildcats Hand Novato First Setback, 55-49

Marin Catholic, after losing its first two Marin Athletic League games, finally put a winning effort together and handed Novato its first league loss of the season last night, 55-49, on the Novato court.

The first half was nip and tuck all the way, Marin Catholic coming out with a 30-28 halftime lead. After intermission, Marin remained in front and stretched the lead to as much as nine points in the final quarter.

The game was won on the boards, Marin outrebounding Novato by 40-24. The shooting percentage was pretty even, Marin hitting 45 per cent in the field goal category and Novato hitting 44 per cent. But Marin, because of the rebounding, got off 51 shots to 34 for Novato. In free throws, Marin had 60 per cent (9 of 15) and Novato had 58 per cent (15 of 26).

Tom Soden was the key man for Marin Catholic, leading the team in scoring with 20 points and in rebounds with 13. Bob Lombardi chipped in with 11 rebounds. Bill Shine, the league's top scorer going into the game, hit 12 points for Marin, all in the first half. He was in foul trouble in the second half and saw limited action.

Ev Fritz and Tom Stetson led the Novato scoring attack with 13 points apiece. Tom Corder hit 11 for the Hornets.

Marin Catholic	14	16	10	15—55
Novato	14	14	10	11—49

Marin Catholic scorers: Tom Soden, 8-4-20; Dave Morrell, 1-0-2; Brad McDonald, 3-3-9; Bob Lombardi, 3-0-6; Bill Shine, 5-2-12; Brian Grove, 2-0-4; Ben Burch, 1-0-2. Totals 23-9—55.

Novato scorers: Ron Rowell, 3-0-6; Tom Stetson, 3-7-13; Tom Corder, 4-3-11; John Dolinsek, 2-2-6; Ev Fritz, 5-3-13. Totals 17-15—49.

San Rafael Rally Knocks Over Tam

A second half rally by San Rafael High School's cage team earned the Bulldogs a 45-37 victory over Tamalpais High last night in Marin Athletic League action.

The home court Indians from Tam held a one-point advantage at half, 17-16, but San Rafael started hitting shots from outside in the second half to win its first of two league games this season. Big man for San Rafael was Ken Erdman who scored 21 points, 12 of them in the final quarter.

San Rafael went ahead 22-20 early in the third period and never gave up the lead. The widest margin for San Rafael was 38-29 in the fourth quarter, but that lead dwindled to 39-37 with 1:50 left in the game when Tam's Larry Gray meshed a bucket and a pair of free throws.

With that two-point lead, San Rafael went into a stall and forced Tam to foul, the Bulldogs cashing in on four charity tosses. Gray, Tam's high scorer with 15 points, fouled out with a half a minute left in the game.

Ron Pedersen was Tam's top rebounder with 8, as the rebounding in the game was pretty even. Six of Pedersen's rebounds were in the final quarter. The game was played before a standing room only crowd in the Tam gym.

San Rafael	6	10	12	17—45
Tamalpais	11	6	7	13—37

San Rafael scorers: Terry Overlid, 2-3-7; Tom Untermann, 1-2-4; Bob Rich, 4-1-9; Ken Erdman, 7-7-21; Bill Pandiani, 2-0-4; Totals: 16-13—45.

Tamalpais scorers: Pete Nelson, 0-2-2; Mike Beaver, 1-0-2; Greg Tellis, 4-5-13; Larry Gray, 6-3-15; Greg Fontan, 1-3-5; Totals: 12-13—37.

San Rafael, Redwood Top 'B' Cage League

San Rafael and Redwood Class B teams are tied for first place today after victories yesterday in Marin Athletic League action.

San Rafael nipped Tamalpais 40-39 and Redwood edged Terra Linda 44-42. Rounding out a real Close night of action, Novato slipped by Marin Catholic, 32-30.

In the Redwood triumph, Jack Fitzhenry won the game with a set shot from the corner with only four seconds remaining in the game. He was his team's top scorer with 16 points. Andre Horn chipped in with 13 points.

In other preliminary games, the Redwood junior varsity downed Terra Linda 57-39 behind the 20 points of George Bertram, and the Giants completed a clean sweep when the frosh beat the Trojans' frosh, 32-26. Tom Seidenberg led Redwood with 12 points in that game.

Tam got revenge with San Rafael when the Indian junior varsity team won its game, 58-33, and the Indian frosh won theirs, 57-39. Jim Duleblhn led the scoring for the Tam frosh with 20 points.

San Rafael Pros Vs. Santa Clara In Bowl Action

The San Rafael Padres, hoping to even their record in the second half, go against the Santa Clara Moonliters tomorrow at 4 p.m. at Moonlite Lanes in a Western Professional Bowling League match.

Last week the Padres were upset at home by the El Cerrito Gators and now carry an 0-1 record in the second half. San Rafael is led by Ron Lisher with a 204 average; Dick Treadway, 200; Terry Booth, 199, and Phil Wallace, 197.

ALONG MARIN'S SPORTS TRAIL

By JIM GILMARTIN

Two Marinites Form Investment Firm—One Is Inactive For Now

Tackle Lee Jamison of the undefeated champion Drake Pirates and halfback Tim Garvin of the once-beaten, runner-up Terra Linda Trojans have been nominated for the North-South Shrine football game in Los Angeles this summer.

That the Marin Athletic League produced two nominees for the North team of graduating high school stars is perhaps more than we could have hoped for, but we feel a third boy deserves a place on the list. That would be end Larry Stein of Drake.

This certainly is not to distract from Jamison's and Garvin's places on the list. Lord knows, we've sung their praises all season. But if Marin were allotted three nominees we'd toss Stein's name into the hat. Larry, who led the MAL in pass receptions, deserves every consideration for the all-star game. He has the finest pair of hands we've seen around here in some time, has all the moves to fake defenders out of their under garments and, a 10.1 sprinter, can really move once he gets the ball. A tribute to his prowess is the fact Drake opponents double and sometimes triple-teamed him all season.

He's 6-1, 185, and one of the big, big, BIG reasons Drake went undefeated.

So, in case any Shrine committeemen are listening, here's a vote for Larry Stein in addition to Lee Jamison and Tim Garvin.

HERE'S A success story for you:

On March 19, 1958, Edward C. Bettini joined the employ of the Marin Country Club at Ignacio as a part-time bartender and general handyman.

Six and a half-years later, Sept. 1, 1964, to be exact, the same Ed Bettini became general manager of the Marin Club.

The story of this young-man-in-a-hurry came to light over the recent holidays when the members of the Marin Club, success stories in their own rights, saluted Bettini with an avalanche of congratulatory post cards and presented him with plaque at the club's Christmas party.

In a job which demands diplomacy, among other talents, Ed Bettini seems to have hit the jackpot. The Marin clubbers think he's the most.

Members have watched Ed grow into his present job. After his assorted jobs around the course and in the clubhouse for three years, he became bar manager in 1961 and in May of 1964 was elevated to assistant club manager to Chuck McCreary. When Chuck left the post last fall, Ed stepped up and in four and a half months has filled the bill beautifully.

Ed was born June 13, 1935 in San Rafael. He attended Fairfax Grammar School, Tam High for two years, then transferred to Drake and went on to Cal Poly at San Luis Obispo where he majored in animal husbandry, earning his degree in three and a half years there. Bettini worked his way through college as a beer pasteurizer in summer months and also raised hogs and sheep for income.

After serving in the U.S. Army Medical Corps for six years, rank of sergeant, Bettini returned to civilian life and began his successful climb up the Marin Country Club ladder.

MILL VALLEY resident Bill Leiser, sports editor of the S.F. Chronicle since 1934 and one of the all-time great guys in this business, is critically ill at San Francisco's Presbyterian Hospital and would welcome messages from his many friends in these parts.

BIG REG CAROLAN, end for Kansas City Chiefs, will attend Marin's Sports Injury Conference Jan. 30 as special guest of committeeman Dr. Harry Hensler. The two are old friends. They met 25 years ago when Dr. Hensler delivered Reg into this world.

BOATING NEWS sends along a booklet titled, "A Sailing We Will Go," which, if you say it fast, sounds like a theme song for a group of thugs. Or if you're a power boater, perhaps "A Salt and Battery" would be a good title. No? Oh.

RED ADAMS, the long-time baseball trainer who passed away recently, will be remembered at a major league rookie all-star ball game scheduled at Candlestick Park Feb. 14.

Red was a trainer at College of Marin and also served the old Oakland Oaks, the San Francisco Seals and the Giants when they first came west. He died at age 64 at Petaluma shortly after the first of the year.

Bay Area scouts are lining up sides for the game to be played in memory of Adams who was keenly interested in helping sandlot players develop. Tickets are on sale at Candlestick.

Seals Turn Cold, Bucks Win By 5-1

The San Francisco Seals two-game win streak was stopped cold Friday night when Portland's fine team flattened the Seals, 5-1.

A crowd of 6,483 at the Cow Palace saw a defensive battle suddenly collapse when Portland rammed home three third period goals.

Len Haley narrowed the margin to 2-1 with a red light at :57 of the third period, but then Bob Ertel, Dick Van Impe and Gerry Goyer rang up last period goals to cinch it.

Bobby Perreault blocked 28 in the Seals nets, while Don Head of Portland had to make only 21 stops.

Since Los Angeles was idle and Victoria also lost, the Seals stayed four points back of the co-holders of fourth place. All three teams have lost 22 and tied one. The Seals have won 15 and the other two clubs 17.

Drake Wins In Practice Over Analy

Drake High School's Pirates now resting on top of the Marin Athletic League standings, won a practice game over Analy High of Sebastopol last night in the Drake gym, 76-63.

Drake has a 2-0 record in league play and now has an overall record of 6 wins and 5 losses.

The Pirates were led by Rick Henika with 26 points, scoring 14 of them in the first half and 12 more in the second. Bill Ingram also had a big night, scoring 22 points.

With a 33-31 lead after the first half, the Pirates moved out in the second half to lead the rest of the game, the edge ranging from 5 to 10 joints. Drake scored 29 points in the final quarter.

Drake also won the Class B game, 46-32. Don Alvarado with 20 points and Wayne Onizuka with 10 paced the winning attack.

An Armload Of Hardware For Marin Skipper

Robert Miller of 217 Cobblestone Drive, San Rafael, walked off with an arm load of hardware at last night's midget Ocean Racing Club's trophy dinner at Sam's Anchor Cafe, Tiburon.

Miller received four trophies for placing second overall in the series of six MORC races in 1964, first in the race to Half Moon Bay, third in the race to Drakes Bay and also third in the return race from Drakes Bay.

Wilt-less Warriors Find Joy—Despite 12th Loss

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—"I'm very happy," said coach Alex Hannum of the unhappy San Francisco Warriors.

The Warriors had just set a new club record—by losing their 12th straight game Friday night, 89-87 to the New York Knicks on a goal tending call at the buzzer.

It was the first Warrior game in 5½ years without 7-foot-1 Wilt Chamberlain, traded to the Philadelphia 76ers Wednesday for three players and an undisclosed amount of cash, believed to be $75,000.

"I'm very happy even though the shots weren't dropping," said Hannum after he calmed down from a rage over referee Earl Strom's call. "I told the players three times they were doing a fine job.

"They were getting into position, taking good shots and playing fine defense," continued Hannum. "When you do that you eventually will be in good shape because the shots have to start dropping sooner or later."

The Warriors played as they did early in the season when Chamberlain was out with an inflamed pancreas. Instead of directing the offense toward the post, they tried to fast break and use screens.

Nate Thurmond, the 6-11 second - year man who replaced Chamberlain, scored 21 points on a poor shooting night and grabbed an amazing 30 rebounds.

Paul Neumann, one of the players obtained in the Chamberlain transaction, was a surprise performer and scored four points.

Hannum said he telephoned Neumann Thursday night and persuaded him to join the club for the two Knick games. Neumann plans to fly back to Philadelphia after tonight's game to make moving arrangements to the San Francisco Peninsula where he played college basketball at Stanford.

Hannum said Connie Dierking and Len Shaffer, the two other former 76ers, also had been contacted by phone. Dierking won't join the team until next Thursday when the Warriors meet the 76ers at Philadelphia because he has to make arrangements for his two daughters and his wife, who is eight months pregnant. The Dierkings live in Cincinnati.

Shaffer, who didn't play for the 76ers this season because of a dispute, wants to play for the Warriors, Hannum said. The coach added that he won't remove another man from the roster until Shaffer is in shape to play.

Veteran forward George Lee was named assistant coach and scout before the Friday game to make room for Neumann and Dierking.

The Knicks and the Warriors, last-place clubs in their respective divisions, played a ragged game. The Warriors shot a poor 30.3 per cent from the floor.

The Knicks led 47-37 at half and maintained their lead until the last seven minutes. Then Guy Rodgers, who led scorers with 22 points, caught fire with eight points and passes that set up four more field goals.

Included in the assists was a pass to Al Attles that set up a driving lay-in that tied it 87-87 with 25 seconds remaining.

After Howard Komives missed a 15-foot jumper, Bob Boozer tipped it up at the buzzer. A wall of frantic hands shot up and referee Strom said an unidentified Warrior hand had blocked the shot on its downward path toward the bucket.

The basket was awarded to Boozer, who along with Howie Reed, led New York scoring with 15 points.

Hannum said Thurmond was the owner of the hand but declared, "Ninety-nine times out of 100, no official will decide a game in a critical situation with a fine-line judgment call."

Despite the outcome, Mieuli was cheery.

"Look at those guys hustle," said the man who signs the paychecks. "We're going to build a new team and we'll draft some local people, some of whom we would not have drafted if Wilt had been here."

LITTLER KNOWS: GOLF FIENDISH

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Any golfer knows golf can be a fiendish thing.

There's the case of Gene Littler. He shoots a 62, nine big strokes under par. Then he has 70, one under par.

So is Littler leading the field to begin the third round of the $34,500 San Diego Open tournament today?

No. Second place.

In the front position was Wes Ellis Jr., of West Caldwell, N.J. with rounds of 66-65—131, as play resumed at the par 35-36—71 Stardust Country Club. Littler trailed with 62-70—132.

The third round promised a struggle between the well-known and the less-known pros.

Tied at 133 were Tony Lema, California's British Open ruler, and Doug Wysong, undoubtedly the best player ever to emerge from McKinney, Tex. (30 miles north of Dallas).

In the 134 group were seasoned Doug Ford, Charley Sifford, Bud Holscher and Jay Dolan of Leicester, Mass.

Ellis said his 131 was his finest 36-hole score, and his putting was on the fantastic side.

NO STRANGER

Wysong, though quiet-spoken, is no complete stranger to prominence. The 25-year-old player reached the finals of the U.S. Amateur championship at Pebble Beach, Calif., in 1961, and lost to another young fellow named Jack Nicklaus.

The man Littler must be the real soft-sell man of golf. He wasn't any more exuberant over his 70 than he was the 62. It was just another day at work.

Gene went over his round. A 40-foot birdie putt merited the same attention as one he sank from seven feet.

"Big story, isn't it?" said the good natured Littler.

Cal's Stall Tactics Fail, UCLA Wins; Stanford Falls

Bruins, 76-54; Trojans Rip Cold Indians

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The California Bears, hoping to throw top-ranked UCLA off pace, used a deliberate stall in their Pacific Athletic Conference basketball game last night. But it didn't work.

The mighty Bruins were sharp and quick, using rapier - like thrusts to tear through the stall strategy.

The final score was UCLA 76, California 54.

In the latter half of a Sports Arena doubleheader Stanford lost its first PAC game of the season to Southern California 75-59. The Indians, who had a 2-0 conference record prior to meeting the Trojans, seldom seemed to find the basket. They trailed 45-25 at the half.

Tonight the four teams will swap opponents, Southern Cal meeting California in the first game and the Bruins facing the Indians in the second.

HUSKIES WIN

A similar arrangement prevailed in the Pacific Northwest, where the Washington Huskies upset the favored Oregon State Beavers 79-70 Friday night at Seattle while the Washington State Cougars were gaining a 75 - 68 victory over Oregon at Pullman.

Tonight the Huskies take on Oregon in Seattle and Oregon State meets Washington State at Pullman.

Steve Olsen, a junior, led Washington's attack against the Beavers 79-70 last night at also had the job of guarding the OSU scoring star, Jim Jarvis. Jarvis wound up as high point man of the evening with 27.

Ted Werner of Washington State was the key to the Cougars' victory over Oregon. He pulled down 18 rebounds and played heads-up defense to help the cause.

USF-SANTA CLARA REMATCH TONIGHT

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Santa Clara, only team to beat ninth-ranked San Francisco this season, gets another crack tonight at the Dons under different circumstances.

The Broncos bounced USF 73-71 Dec. 30 in the championship game of the West Coast Athletic Conference tournament. But that was at San Jose and didn't count in league standings.

This time, it's at USF, the game counts and Santa Clara won't have the full services of Mike Gervasoni, the 5-9 back court leader who paced the Broncos to victory in their first two WCAC games last weekend.

In other WCAC action tonight —the last before next month— Pacific and St. Mary's, each undefeated in two WCAC games, meet in Moraga, and San Jose State travels to UC Santa Barbara in a game between teams winless in league competition.

Gervasoni, who's been playing with a broken toe, an injured knee and ankle and a charley horse, goes tonight with two sprained fingers on his right and shooting hand.

The Broncos lost their first six games of the season and have won the last five.

USF WEAKNESS

That loss to Santa Clara was the only USF defeat in 12 games and illustrated the Dons' bench weakness. Deadly shooting Joe Ellis had a sensational first half but tired after intermission because of a cold. His replacements were ineffective.

The St. Mary's Gaels were considered one of the conference's weaker teams, but enjoy a spotless WCAC record and the home court advantage. Pacific features sophomores Bob Krulish and Keith Swagerty, the third leading rebounder in the country.

The Gaels' rooters are so raucous that USF and Santa Clara have special league permission to avoid the St. Mary's Gym and play on neutral courts.

San Jose and Santa Barbara were expected to end up high in the WCAC standings, but have disappointed so far.

Carter Fails Again In All-Star Bowling

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Fred Lening of Yardley, Pa., led 216 survivors from an original field of 432 into the quarter-finals of the $100,000 All-Star bowling tournament today.

The burly pro totaled 3,973 for the first 18 games in this 13-day pageant. Lening, who led the men after Thursday's action, fortified his position with a six game series of 1,274 yesterday.

Pat Patterson of St. Louis was just 25 pins behind the leader. Patterson leaped from fifth to second place after shooting a 1,354 series.

CARTER OUSTED

Don Carter of St. Louis was the most prominent bowler to be eliminated from the tournament. Carter, winner of four All-Stars who virtually dominated bowling for over a decade, failed for the second year in a row to survive the first cut of the tournament. He finished 246th.

Low score to qualify for the quarter finals was 3,448.

Taro Miyasato of Honolulu bowled a perfect game yesterday, the second of the tournament. Roy Lown of Brockton, Mass., recorded the first opening day 300 in the 24 year history of the tournament Wednesday.

The women's field of 216 began qualifying this morning.

'Honest' Platoon Football

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — College coaches will be able to play honest, two-platoon football next season.

They probably will not get the blank check for free and unlimited substitution they have demanded for a dozen years. But the wierd spectacle of a team deliberately jumping offsides or delaying the game to beat the rule apparently will be seen no more.

This seemed a sure bet today as the Football Rules Committee of the National Collegiate Athletic Association began its second day of secret sessions.

After about eight hours of debate yesterday, the committee threw out all except two proposals for changes in the substitution rule.

One would bring back the unrestricted rule in effect prior to 1953. This one is backed by 90 per cent of the nation's coaches.

The other would allow substitution of full platoons whenever the ball changes hands and the replacement of two players at any time.

The committee members have been told not to express their opinions outside the meeting room. But an off - the - record sampling of sentiment indicated that the second rule is the one likely to pass.

Many administrators and athletic directors feel that what the coaches want is not necessarily best for the game. Some, like Committee Chairman Ivan Williamson, believe that a player is best served if he is taught to play the game both ways.

GREAT DEMANDS

But the demands for two-platoon football is so great the committee will go along with it.

The rule expected to pass would kill the gimmick coaches used last year to get in their defensive units on fourth down.

Platoon substitution was allowed only between quarters and while the clock was stopped. Rather than waste a time out, coaches ordered a deliberate rule violation and took a five-yard penalty to stop the clock and switch units before punting.

The proposed rule, Williamson said, will require more coaching of offensive teams on punt coverage but will eliminate the need for cheating on the rule.

Williamson, while doubting that the committee would make the coaches "really happy," said he thought this rule would be well received.

The committee defeated by a 13-8 vote a proposal that coaches be allowed to confer with one of their players on the sidelines during a charged time out.

It also rejected 23-0 a proposal that teams behind in the score be given the option of receiving after every score and at halftime.

$7 MILLION DEAL

NBC Gets Rights To Grid Playoff

HOUSTON (AP) — The National Broadcasting Co. has increased its investment in the American Football League to more than $43 million with a contract giving the NBC the television rights to AFL championship and All-Star games for the next five years.

The network purchased the five-year rights to the league's title game and all-star attraction for more than $7 million last night. NBC previously concluded a five-year, $36 million investment in regular season AFL games.

The all star contract was negotiated during the AFL's winter meetings and announced by Carl Lindemann Jr., vice president of NBC Sports. The new contract calls for a sliding scale, with $850,000 reportedly allotted to the 1965 title game and the figure increasing to an estimated $2.2 million in the fifth year.

Proceeds of the playoff and all-star games will go toward the player pension plan, making payments comparable to those in the National Football League.

The NFL has one year to go on a two-year, $3.6 million television pact with the Columbia Broadcasting System for its championship playoff. CBS also televises regular-season NFL games at $14.1 million per-year.

NBC held the video rights to the NFL's All-Star game until this year, when its contract with the Los Angeles Newspaper Publishers Association, sponsors of the game, expired.

In another development yesterday, the AFL players came up with an idea that could stabilize the winning and losing shares of all major sports events, including football title games and the World Series.

Under the suggestion, a definite amount of television money and gate receipts would be earmarked for the players involved in championships, regardless of the size of the stadium.

The players asked the owners to set aside $625,000 for the players involved. That would provide $375,000 for the winners and $250,000 for the losers, and standardized winning shares of about $9,000 and losing shares of approximately $6,000 each year.

This manner of distribution of cash would make it unimportant to the players whether the game was played in a big stadium, like Shea in New York, or in a smaller park like Boston's.

On the same theory, baseball players could set up a permanent fund so a World Series winner would get the same amount whether the Series was played in Yankee Stadium or at Forbes Field in Pittsburgh.

DEFER ACTION

The AFL club owners deferred action on recommendations by the pro-college relations committee of the National Collegiate Athletic Association on premature signings of college players. Commissioner Joe Foss said he and the league's executive committee preferred to wait until all interested parties, including the NFL, could hold a joint meeting.

Foss blasted the NFL when he said, "for one league or association to make promises of independent action is not the solution to problems that are equally disturbing to all. The AFL stands ready to cooperate with all in the common interest."

Pete Rozelle, NFL commissioner, recently prohibited his teams from signing players until they have completed their college eligibility including bowl games.

Eagles Urged: Quit NFL Players' Assn.

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Pete Retzlaff, veteran end of the Philadelphia Eagles and a former president of the National Football League's Players Association, predicted today that Eagles' owner Jerry Wolman won't be successful in getting his players to jump the association and form a company union.

Wolman said yesterday he had not discussed the idea with NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle or other club owners. He also denied it was a move to break up the Players Association.

Wolman said he talked to most of his players personally and that 21 of them agreed with his concept of player-club relations, five were against and two undecided. He promised the players off-season jobs and quick action on all grievances if they joined a club union.

Retzlaff was not among the Eagles' players questioned. He suggested that Wolman should take another poll. He said he was convinced this was not the true sentiment of the players "because I've been close to the pulse of their thinking for nine years."

"I know from experience," continued Retzlaff, "that players won't always say what's really on their minds when confronted by management, especially if they think their job may be in jeopardy.

"It's too bad we couldn't have a showdown tomorrow. Mr. Wolman would be quite surprised to find where our players really stand."

Wolman said he was disgusted with what he termed irresponsible statements of Cleveland's Bernie Parrish, who this week called for a new commissioner to replace Rozelle. The Eagles' owner said his only interest was the players, "before the season, after the season and when their careers are finished."

Hill said from his home in Lake Jackson, Tex., that he had sent telegrams to the other 39 players asking them to turn down Wolman's proposal.

In Baltimore, Ordell Braase of the Colts, association president, said he was confident the association would retain the support of the players. He echoed Retzlaff's sentiments, saying that he had learned that many of the 21 Eagles who Wolman said had agreed to back a company union had now changed their minds.

Builders Return To Baseball Wars

The Billings-Hutchinson builders semi-pro baseball team will return to the baseball wars tomorrow in its first game in nine weeks.

The Builders will travel to San Francisco to take on the City League AA champions of 1963, the Blazers. The game will be played on the Garrigan diamond in Funston Playground at 11:30 a.m.

Corinthians Host Winter Regatta On Bay Tomorrow

The Corinthian Yacht Club of Tiburon will stage the fourth of its five-race 1964-65 midwinter regatta series tomorrow in San Francisco Bay.

If the weather is right, the first race will start at 11:30 a.m. from the clubhouse. The weather wasn't right last weekend when lack of winds caused the cancellation of the Golden Gate Yacht Club midwinter races last Sunday.

Race Committeemen George Bates, Bob Oakley and Bob Vidmar of CYC are hoping for good weather for tomorrow's action.

Training Officer Set For Fire Department

San Rafael Fire Department will get its first fulltime training officer Feb. 1, if the city council approves the appointment Monday night.

Gaylord E. Bonfield of Walnut Creek, now serving with the U.S. Steel Corp. Fire Department in Pittsburg, has been selected by Fire Chief Vance Trivett and the San Rafael Fire Commission for the new job. He will hold the rank of captain, with pay of $757 per month.

Up to now, training in the San Rafael department has been handled on a part-time basis by one officer on each shift. The department has outgrown this, Chief Trivett said, with the addition of the No. 4 firehouse now in operation and upcoming addition of a fifth firehouse at Glenwood.

The position of training officer was authorized by the city council when the current year's budget was approved last summer.

Bonfield has about 12 years experience as a training officer, Chief Trivett said. He has taught several courses in fire fighting science in junior colleges, and is now teaching such a course at College of Marin.

He will give basic training courses to all new firemen and advanced courses to the experienced force as a continuous program, the chief explained.

Bonfield, his wife and child are now looking for a house in San Rafael, Trivett reported.

Planners Due Gas Station Bid

Union Oil Co. will ask the San Anselmo Planning Commission to let it build a service station across from the First Baptist Church of San Anselmo on Sir Francis Drake Boulevard when the commission meets Monday at 8 p.m. at the City Hall.

The commission will hold a public hearing on the company's request to rezone three lots at Sais Avenue and Sir Francis Drake Boulevard from residential to commercial.

Another public hearing will be held on Allan Larkins Jr.'s request to have a property at 60 Magnolia Avenue rezoned from single family residential to neighborhood apartment.

The commission will consider Greyhound Bus Lines request to have a shelter included in the master plan for parking lot "A" at the Hub.

Hospital Drawings Due Next

Next step in the planning of a new San Rafael General Hospital will be preparation of architects' drawings to show how all facilities will be integrated, Administrator Arthur G. Burns announced today.

A joint meeting of the medical staff and the board of trustees planning staff this week resulted in conclusions on what would be included in the new hospital.

Still undecided is a hyperbaric chamber, where surgey can be performed under oxygen pressure. This costs about $250,000, Burns said. He said the decision on this is awaiting completion of planning on a model chamber in the East.

Out-patient services will not be included in the first phase of construction, Burns said.

The hospital will be single accommodation—that is, there will be single rooms only with no wards.

Rights Task Force Named

Members are Rev. G. William Beale and Rev. John O'Conner, San Rafael; Dr. Ellen Binckley, Mrs. Robert Murphy, Mrs. M. James Norton and Mrs. Walter Turner, Mill Valley; Mrs. Arnold Come and Alvin Goldstein Jr., San Anselmo; Mrs. Alvin C. Bynum, Marin City; Zane Meckler, Tiburon; Douglas Merrill, Novato, and Dr. John Wellington, Sausalito.

The task force has been given the responsibility of studying the status of human rights "affected in or by education," Mrs. Garoutte said.

Sanitary Unit Seeks Repairs

The Las Gallinas Valley Sanitary District board is going to seek repair or reimbursement from Marin County because of a break in a 12-inch main along Lucas Valley Road, 500 feet west of the county farm.

Board members at a meeting Thursday night charged that the county was responsible for the break during a recent washout because of its culvert work, which directed water against and around the main without providing protection.

The board adjourned to Jan. 28 for discussion of whether the district should hire an engineer-manager.

Seven Apply For Post In Fairfax

Seven applications have been received so far for the new city administrator's job in Fairfax, and "definitely, no choice has been made yet," City Councilman Robert R. Souza reported today.

Souza is in charge of recruiting the administrator. The job was created in an ordinance introduced Dec. 12 and adopted Dec. 28. The ordinance will take effect Jan. 28.

Souza said that it probably will be mid-Ferbuary or later before the selection is made. Deadline for applications is Jan. 29. Souza said he plans to have the applications reviewed by a three-man board—probably of other cities' officials, but not including Fairfax councilmen . . . perhaps on Jan. 30.

The Fairfax council would then interview the most likely applicants.

Souza said the written qualifications for the job include requirement of a college education, not necessarily in public administration, and state that five years of recent experience would be preferred.

Yule Is Coming Late For This Happy Family

Christmas will be celebrated belatedly at the home of Mr. and Mrs. James T. Hines Sr. of Mill Valley tomorrow when their son, S/Sgt. James T. Hines Jr., returns home for the first time in five years.

Hines, 31, has been stationed for six months in Viet Nam, where he was senior crew chief flying helicopters. He left Viet Nam three weeks ago for Thailand and is now at George Air Force Base near Victorville.

A graduate of Tamalpais High School and a student at College of Marin before entering the Air Force, Hines will arrive home Sunday with his wife, Kathryn, for a 10-day leave.

"We have saved his presents for him," said his mother. The reunion will start at 5 p.m. at the Hines home at 12 Oak Street.

Becomes Ensign

Thomas D. Penders, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph F. Penders of 93 Bayo Vista Avenue, Mill Valley, has been commissioned ensign in the Navy at Newport, R. I., and assigned to temporary duty on the carrier Franklin Delano Roosevelt, in the Caribbean Sea. He will next go to flight training at Pensacola, Fla.

MANPOWER
arrives in San Rafael

For a long time we have been looking forward to opening an office in Marin County, and we are very pleased to announce that our San Rafael office now joins the other 350 Manpower offices throughout the world.

Manpower Inc. is the worlds largest Temporary Help Service and also the home of the "White Glove Girl." We are always in need of skilled office help, and if you are a Stenographer, Typist, Bookkeeper or Transcriber (just to mention a few) we would very much like you to come into our office and register. You may work the days and hours you wish, you will be paid a high hourly rate (and incidentally, your checks are written locally every week) and temporary work gives you the opportunity to keep up your present skills and also learn new ones.

Why no join the 190,000 Manpower employees and register today? There is so much we want to tell you . . . so please call 456-4824 and welcome us to Marin County.

OPPORTUNITY UNLIMITED

The nation's largest, most successful building organization in its field is continuing its expansion in the Northern California area. The management consultant firm for this company has been asked to interview and select men for appointment to an ambitious sales management training program. This multi-million-dollar-a-year sales group, with offices in 44 major California markets, is scheduled to open 10 new offices in the immediate future. There are openings NOW for presently successful advertising, real estate, insurance, construction and other professional sales representatives desiring an unlimited opportunity to assume management responsibility and higher financial reward. (Real Estate Licenses not required.) Men chosen will work closely with sales managers of established offices. They will complete a highly personalized training and orientation program with extremely high earnings. Future plans for successful applicants include rapid elevation to positions of ownership & management in new offices. Monday, Jan. 18, 7:45 p.m. The Lodge, 2 miles North of Novato on Hiway 101. HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. THEODORE R. VAN DELLEN

False Pregnancy Held Mostly To Be Mental Problem's Result

VAN DELLEN

Some women experience all the symptoms of pregnancy even though conception has not occurred. Menstruation ceases, the breasts and abdomen enlarge, and morning sickness ensues. Nine months later, labor pains come on and these women go to the hospital. But there is no delivery.

False pregnancy (pseudocyesis) is no newfangled condition. Four centuries before Christ was born, Hippocrates described 12 cases. Through the years many instances have been recorded, including that of Mary Tudor, the 16th century English queen.

THE VAST MAJORITY of these women are married and childless. They usually have emotional problems, including a strong desire to be like their friends who have families. Many are mentally unsound and there is something to the statement, "They are pregnant in the head."

The illusion usually begins when menstrual irregularities arise—usually complete cessation or scant periods. The abdomen enlarges but not—as once thought—because of gas. Apparently the pelvic and breast tissues swell following changes in the endocrine glands. Typical morning nausea is encoutered but these women seem to eat more; at least, the gain in weight is greater than occurs in normal pregnancy. Fetal movements usually are traced to churning intestines.

MOST OF THESE women refuse examination and the family doctor may make the diagnosis on the basis of symptoms. But even if he tells them there is no pregnancy, they won't believe him. These patients often can be helped with psychotherapy. Unless they develop insight into the emotional aspects of pseudocyesis, they may become "pregnant" again and again.

(Dr. Van Dellen will answer questions on medical topics if stamped, self-addressed envelope accompanies request.)

CROUPY YOUNGSTERS

C. H. writes: Both my young children suffer from croup every winter. Is there any way to prevent these attacks?

REPLY

The best preventive is moisture in the bedroom. This can be provided with pans of water over the radiators or with a commercial humidifier. Meanwhile, keep their resistance high by insisting on adequate rest, a normal diet, and out-of-door activity.

SEIZURES AND BLACKOUTS

L. T. writes: Are all seizures and blackouts epilepsy?

REPLY

No, because other neurological conditions can mimic epilepsy. In addition, there are several forms of epilepsy: Convulsions occur in the grand mal type whereas the blackout in petit mal is only momentary. Send stamped, self-addressed envelope for leaflet on epilepsy.

FAILING HEART

G. B. E. writes: Can a woman of 70 with congestive heart failure be cared for at home?

REPLY

Yes. In this condition, the heart is not functioning properly and the individual develops dropsy. This is treated with a low salt diet, digitalis, and one of the diuretics. Oxygen may be needed. All of these can be used at home, under direction.

THIRD TIME AROUND

V. N. writes: Is it true that the third pregnancy is the most difficult?

REPLY

No. Each pregnancy may be smooth or rough, depending upon the physical condition of the mother and whether complications develop. By the third, the woman should know what to expect and most of the difficulties stem from having two other smaller children and a husband to care for at home.

Library To Ask For U.S. Funds

The Mill Valley Library board of trustees Thursday night agreed to apply for about $125,000 in federal funds to be used to complete the basement room of the proposed new library.

Under the board's original plans, the room was to be delayed for later construction.

Trustees discussed pay periods of employees to bi-weekly, as has been done for other city employees, but took no action.

Special Meeting

The Kentfield Civic League has called a special directors' meeting at 8 p.m. Monday at 818 College Avenue to set league policy in preparation for the county board of supervisors' public hearing on the Kentfield master plan Thursday.

TELEVISION REVIEW

Here Are A Few To Watch For

By RICK DU BROW

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Notes to watch television by:

The Headliners: Gracie Fields visits NBC-TV's Jack Paar next Friday. . .the same day, Ethel Merman appears on CBS-TV's "On Broadway Tonight". . .Kirk Douglas and Eleanor Parker star in NBC-TV's fine Wednesday night movie, "Detective Story," Jan. 27. . .The cast of CBS-TV's "The Munsters" and the New Christy Minstrels will be featured in the annual one-hour Marineland of the Pacific special April 18. . .Kate Smith hosts ABC-TV's "Hollywood Palace" next Saturday, and guests include Mort Sahl, Ben Blue and Trini Lopez . . . Burgess Meredith, who has replaced the ailing Dean Jagger on NBC-TV's "Mr. Novak" series, makes his debut as a regular Feb. 2.

Add Headliners: Ken Boyer of the St. Louis Cardinals and Brooks Robinson of the Baltimore Orioles, winners of baseball's most valuable player awards last season, are interviewed Monday on NBC-TV's "Today" program. . . Basketball great Bob Cousy, now a coach at Boston College, shows some of the game's techniques on "Today" Tuesday . . . Neither Stan Laurel nor Bud Abbott, both now infirm, is believed to receive any compensation for their many films that appear on television. . .Abbott made a number of video shorts with his partner, the late Lou Costello, but these films are reported to have been owned by Costello, who paid Abbott a salary.

The Programs: NBC-TV's daytime entry, "Say When," is expected to depart from the network in a few months. . . Some insiders are wondering whether "CBS Reports" will lose its prime-time status next season. . .Sen. Everett Dirksen is the guest on NBC-TV's "Meet The Press" Jan. 24 . . . U. S. Commissioner of Education Francis Keppel appears on CBS-TV's "Face The Nation" Sunday . . . ABC Radio obtained rights to a James Bond series. . . . CBS-TV's "What's My Line?" marks its 15th birthday Feb. 7. . .Sam network's "Camera Three" looks at the artistic career of Alexander Calder Sunday . . . Steve Binder is reported leaving as director of NBC-TV's dreadful "Hullabaloo" series . . . Bing Crosby's ABC-TV series is a virtual certainty to be canceled.

Sex Dept.: Video's suggestive soap operas have the networks thrilled with the ratings results. . .Current reported plans now call not only for an expansion of ABC-TV's "Peyton Place" from two to three times weekly, but also for another twice-weekly night-time soap opera about one of the "Peyton Place" regulars. . .This means ABC-TV would have five-night-a-week soap opera, presumably later in the year. . .Meanwhile, a former "Peyton Place" writer says he has a possible night-time soaper in the works with NBC-TV, about a Broadway actress who lives in Westport, Conn.

Two Stamp Machines Are Lifted

Burglars lifted two stamp machines out of the San Rafael Military Academy administration building but abandoned them in the bushes outside, San Rafael police reported today.

Patrolman Robert Larrison said the night watchman found the machines in the bushes on the southeast side of the building Thursday night. The thieves had apparently carted the machines from the hallway of the building, then abandoned them when they could not reach the coins inside.

The theft occurred between 8:45 and 9:30 p.m.

Two other burglaries were reported Thursday.

George Montgomery, manager of Villa Motel at 1600 Lincoln Avenue, said a neat burglar had pried open the metal cash box inside a soft drink machine located to the rear of the restaurant section. He said there was less than $1 in coins in the machine.

At Arthur Murray Dance Studio on the Miracle Mile, manager Robert Nicholas Kelly found desks and cabinets ransacked yesterday morning. However, nothing of value seemed to be missing.

New Patrolman Approval Asked

San Rafael City Council will be asked Monday to approve the appointment of Joseph V. Leonard, new patrolman who has been on duty with the police department since Jan. 1.

Patrolman Leonard's salary is $525 a month. He fills the vacancy left by the retirement of Sgt. Arthur W. Fellows Dec. 31 after more than 20 years on the force.

A dinner honoring Sergeant Fellows, sponsored by the city employees association, will be held tonight in the Redwood Club, Fourth and C Streets, starting with a coctail hour at 7 p.m.

Meeting Postponed

Last night's scheduled meeting of directors of the Bolinas Public Utility District board was postponed until 7:30 p.m. next Friday because several directors were unable to appear.

Burglary Suspect Is Arraigned

Thomas Kent Richmond, 24, of San Francisco, charged with the burglary yesterday of Shakey's Pizza Parlor, across Highway 101 from Terra Linda, was arraigned yesterday afternoon in Marin Municipal Court.

Judge Leonard A. Thomas appointed the public defender's officer to represent him and continued the case for plea at 1:30 p.m. Monday.

Richmond, held in Marin County jail in lieu of $3,500, was arrested by San Rafael police after being trapped in the parlor, 4150 Redwood Highway, about 5:30 a.m. yesterday.

Skunk Is Found Not To Be Rabid

A skunk shot as a suspected rabid animal in Novato Tuesday was found not to be rabid after tests completed yesterday at the Marin County Health Department.

Mrs. Eugene A. Emert of 666 Orange Avenue, Novato, spotted the skunk acting strangely near her home. She called police who shot it and sent the remains to the health department for tests.

Driver Fined $166

John Alan Patterson, 26, of San Marcos, San Diego County, was fined $166 yesterday in Marin Municipal Court for drunken driving. He was arrested Oct. 18 by California Highway Patrol on Highway 101.

Today is Saturday, Jan. 16, the 16th day of 1965 with 349 to follow.

The moon is approaching the full stage. The morning stars are Mercury, Venus, Mars, Uranus, Neptune and Pluto. The evening stars are Jupiter and Saturn.

American designer Samuel McIntire was born on this day in 1757.

On this day in history:

In 1833, the U.S. Civil Service was established.

A thought for the day—English philosopher Francis Bacon said: "Fortune is like the stock market, where many times, if you stay a little, the price will fall."

TIME AND TIDE

HOW TO PLAY

WINNING BRIDGE

By ALFRED SHEINWOLD

Try A Spot Of Black Magic If Science Looks Hopeless

Bridge players who are opposed to sin of all kinds should read the rest of today's column with only one eye.

We're about to discuss how you can make a contract that no honest man should make.

Opening lead — ♡ 5

An honest man can make only eight tricks with this hand. When he leads spades in an attempt to take a ninth trick, the opponents get three spades and two diamonds.

SINFUL WORLD

This is a shame. Virtue should be rewarded. But we live in a sinful world, and the only way to make three notrump with this hand is to play it wickedly.

You must take advantage of human nature, remembering that it is the nature of opponents to oppose. If you push, they pull; and vice (excuse the expression) versa.

Win the first trick in dummy with the jack of hearts and lead the three of diamonds from dummy. You plan to "finesse" with the ten of diamonds.

FINESSE LOSS

You expect to lose this finesse, of course, but you also expect the opponents to stay away from diamonds for the rest of the hand.

In fact, the chances are that West will immediately switch to spades in a desparate attempt to get five tricks before you make the game.

FEEL BETTER

Since this is a sinful way to make the hand, take out your handkerchief and sympathize with the opponents. It will make them feel better.

Don't overdo this type of play. You can seldom flimflam the opponents into abandoning a suit just because you lead it first.

But keep this in the back of your mind in case of need. When fair means fail, try foul.

What do you say?

Answer: Bid one diamond.

With two biddable four-card suits, respond in the cheaper suit. If partner now bids one heart, you can still show the spades at the level of one.

Unity Octave Still To Be Held Despite Death Of Initiator

San Rafael's precedent-setting Christian Unity Octave will go on, despite the unexpected death of the man who, perhaps, did most to make the joint worship of Catholics and Protestants in the community's churches a reality.

Only the opening night's service and dialogue, set originally for the auditorium of St. Raphael's Parish, will be postponed in respect to the memory of Msgr. Daniel McAlister, late administrator of the parish.

All other programs of the eight-day joint effort of the Catholic parish and four Protestant churches in the community will be conducted as scheduled, according to Rev. John Petroni, assistant pastor of St. Raphael's, and Rev. John Riley, pastor of St. Paul's Episcopal Church.

"Monsignor McAllister would have wanted us to go ahead with it," Father Petroni explained. He recalled that it was Rev. McAlister who three years ago, sparked St. Raphael's Unity Octave observances that now have grown into an ecumenical project meaningful to a broad cross-section of the community's religious residents.

"We owe it to the community," Monsignor McAlister said while discussing Unity Octave plans shortly before his death.

Last year, more than 7,000 persons and 30 Marin County ministers attended the Octave events, then held only at St. Raphael's. Participation this year is expected to be even greater, with the services being held in turn at five churches, and with other programs of community-wide interest planned.

"It is difficult to relate how impressed I am to see the priests and ministers of five different churches working together, discussing openly with great mutual respect common ground and respective theological positions," declared Father Petroni.

"If no one were to attend the Octave, it is already a success."

Aspects of unity will be stressed in the evening services at each of the participating Protestant churches, and delegations of parishioners from St. Raphael's will attend each of the Octave events, formally participating for the first time in worship services of Protestant congregations.

Another first will be recorded Tuesday, when Archbishop Joseph T. McGucken of the Catholic Archdiocese of San Francisco and clergy and invited laymen from St. Raphael's will attend the annual dinner for St. Paul's Episcopal Church. Although Archbishop McGucken spoke last week on his observations at the second session of the Vatican Council, to those attending the annual dinner of the Episcopal Diocese of California, Tuesday's dinner will be the first time such a visit has been paid to a non-Catholic congregation in the West.

In line with recent reforms in Catholic worship, the program for the Christian Hymn Festival a week from tonight in Angelico Hall, Dominican College, has been specially designed to acquaint parish members with Protestant musical forms. Rev. Fred C. Braunschweiger of Trinity Lutheran, First Presbyterian choirmaster and Barry Mineah, organist and choirmaster at St. Paul's.

Leading participants in what was to have been the opening dialogue of the Unity Octave—the program postponed due to Monsignor McAlister's death—were to be Dr. Robert McAfee Brown, noted Protestant ecumenical leader, and Rev. Frank Norris, who also has attended Vatican Council sessions, is a faculty member of Bay Area seminaries, and a noted author, as is McAfee.

Baha'i Lecture Will Observe World Day

Members of the Baha'i World Faith in San Rafael and Marin County will join Baha'i followers in 1,600 United States communities tomorrow in special programs honoring World Religion Day, according to George A. Barker of Kentfield.

In San Rafael, widely-known pianist, concert singers and educator Mrs. Alla Dakserhof of Healdsburg will speak on "The oneness of Religion" during the 8 p.m. meeting in the Louise Boyd Natural Science Museum. She has been head librarian of the Baha'i school in Geyserville for the past 10 years, and teaches piano in her Healdsburg studio.

Mrs. Dakserhof studied music at the University of Petrograd in czarist Russia, and later was a faculty member of the Sherwood Music Conservatory in Chicago.

World Religion Day was designated for the third Sunday of each January by the National Spiritual Assembly of the Baha'is of the United States in 1949. The special program in San Rafael is open to the public; Mrs. Dakserhof's speech will be followed by an audience discussion. Free refreshments will be served.

HERE IS PROGRAM FOR UNITY OCTAVE

Here is the program for the San Rafael Christian Unity Octave, sponsored jointly by St. Raphael's Catholic Church and St. Paul's Episcopal, First Presbyterian, First Methodist and Trinity Lutheran churches of the community:

TOMORROW

The program originally scheduled to be held in the St. Raphael's auditorium, has been postponed because of the death of Monsignor Daniel McAlister, administrator of St. Raphael's. It may be re-scheduled. Details will be announced later.

MONDAY

"I Believe in the Holy Catholic Church," sermon by Rev. Wesley C. Baker, in the First Presbyterian Church, 8 p.m. Open to the public.

TUESDAY

St. Paul's Episcopal Church annual dinner with election of vestrymen, 7 p.m., at Dominic's Restaurant. Dinner by reservations only. At 8:30 p.m., Archbishop Joseph T. McGucken will speak on "Ecuminism and Vatican II," relating his observations at the Vatican Council, broadcast at 8:30 p.m. over KTIM-FM. Limited post-dinner seating available through St. Paul's Church.

WEDNESDAY

"I Believe in the Forgiveness of Sins," theme of unity worship service in the First Methodist Church of San Rafael at 8 p.m. Rev. Donald H. Baldwin, host pastor. Open to the public.

THURSDAY

"I Believe in the Resurrection of the Body," St. Paul's Episcopal Church, 8 p.m. Rev. John Riley, host pastor. Open to the public.

FRIDAY

"I Believe in Life Everlasting," Trinity Lutheran Church, 8 p.m. Rev. Fred C. Braunschweiger, host pastor. Open to the public.

SATURDAY

SUNDAY, JAN. 24

"Christians in Neighborhood Dialogue." Ecumenical meetings in 30 San Rafael homes, not open to public.

Synod's Top Official Will Take Pulpit

Dr. Carl W. Segerhammar, president of the Synod of the Pacific Southwest of the Lutheran Church in America, will be guest preacher at tomorrow's opening celebration of a week of prayer for Christian unity, in Faith Lutheran Church.

During the 11 a.m. service, prayers and the Litany for Christian Unity will be offered, according to Bliss W. Bellinger, pastor.

Dr. Segerhammar, himself active in the field of ecumenical relations, presides over the states of California, Arizona, Nevada, Utah and Hawaii in Lutheran Church of America affairs.

S.F. Churches Also Planning For Octave

San Francisco Protestant ministers will be conducting Christian Unity Octave beginning Monday in Grace Episcopal Cathedral.

The participating clergymen, unlike San Rafael's Octave rites, will not include Roman Catholics.

A highlight of the San Francisco Octave is expected to be the 11 a.m. service Jan. 24, at which Dr. Eugene Carson Blake, stated clerk of the United Presbyterian Church in the U.S.A., will review the proposal he made three years ago, that the Episcopal, Presbyterian, Methodist and United Church of Christ unify into one church.

PASTOR FOR NIGHT-PEOPLE — On Chicago's neon-lighted near north side entertainment strip, Episcopalian minister Rev. Robert H. Owen, talks with a passerby. He keeps perhaps the strangest office hours of any clergyman. (AP Wirephoto)

Fiesta Dinner Will Honor Missions

Fiesta night at 6:30 p.m. Friday the First Baptist Church of San Anselmo will introduce the theme of the School of Missions, "American Baptists with a Spanish Accent" with a typical Spanish dinner, in the church's social hall.

The program will include the father and son team of Celpho and William Hurtado with Spanish concert marimba music. Celpho, the father is soloist with the San Francisco Symphony and has appeared in Carnegie Hall. The choir from the Spanish speaking Baptist Church in San Francisco will sing several numbers. The School of Missions will continue this theme with meetings the following six Sundays at 6:30 p.m. at the church Sir Francis Drake Boulevard at Sais Avenue in San Anselmo.

Chicagoan Ministers To Evening Worriers

By MARGARET SCHERF

CHICAGO (AP) — Amid the gaudy neon lights which awaken Rush Street at dusk is a small desk lamp, illuminating in a second-story window a narrow white sign: "Night Pastor."

Behind it, six nights a week, sits the Rev. Robert H. Owen, minister to the "night people" — the bartenders, B-girls, musicians, cabbies and cooks of Chicago's near North Side entertainment strip.

Father Owen, 40, a Protestant Episcopal priest with a wife and six children, describes his work as an "offbeat ministry." His comments during an interview Wednesday bore out the description:

—"This guy had just been rolled of $800 and somebody referred him to me. I didn't get the $800 back but I think I made him feel a little better about losing it.

—"A young couple who had been living together for six months saw the sign in the window and came up out of curiosity. Three days later I married them."

—"A lot of drunks wander in. They need to get some swill in them before they can talk about their problems."

In September, after "talking and talking and talking," Father Owen got permission from Bishop Gerald F. Burrill of the Diocese of Chicago to start a "night pastorate."

Those who come to see him have family problems, marital problems, problems with liquor or narcotics, but basically they are bothered about religion.

"Usually they've been in the church earlier in their lives but have dropped out. Now they're looking for something — what they're really looking for is God," he said.

Baptist Men To Hear Deputy District Atty.

Donald Patterson, deputy district attorney of Marin County will tell of the varied aspects of the office's duties Thursday night at the Men's Fellowship of the First Baptist Church of San Anselmo.

The dinner meeting, starting at 6:30 p.m., is open to all men, with reservations in advance.

Flock Thoughtful In Giving Ways

HOUSTON (UPI) — Members of the congregation of the Memorial Drive Presbyterian Church of Houston are generally well-to-do. So they initiated a system to give to others each time they gave to the church.

For each dollar the church spends on itself, it gives a dollar to some cause outside Memorial Drive Presbyterian — to mission work in the national church, to charities outside religion and to other projects.

Church membership has risen steadily since the system was started — a fact that makes the pastor, Dr. Charlie Shedd, believe the arrangement gives members some feetling of use and some gratification.

Missionary To Talk At Lutheran Church

Missionary Rev. Harold M. Ottemueller will describe his activities in Nigeria, West Africa, at a meeting in Trinity Lutheran Church, San Rafael, at 8 p.m. Tuesday.

At present, Rev. Ottemueller is studying at the University of California in Los Angeles, enrolled in courses in linguistics, anthropology and public health, according to Rev. Fred C. Braunschweiger, pastor at Trinity Lutheran.

Baker To Address Women's Group

Rev. Wesley C. Baker, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church, San Rafael, will speak on "Finding Meaning in an Overcrowded World" at a discussion meeting for women Wednesday at 10 a.m. The meeting will be at the home of Rev. James E. Symons, pastor of the St. Andrew United Presbyterian Church of Marin City and Tamalpais Valley at 335 Jean Street, Mill Valley.

It is one of a series, said Symons, and open to the public.

Legend Says, Jesus Saw Britain

GLASTONBURY, England (AP) —Crumbling stone walls probe the English sky and mark the spot where some men say Christ walked.

The ruined abbey here harbors other exciting traditions. King Arthur and Queen Guenevere are said be be buried under the carpet of grass that now grows around pillars of what was a vast cathedral.

There is little doubt that Glastonbury is the oldest religious foundation in Britain. Archeological evidence indicates the presence more than 2,000 years ago of a Celtic pagan temple.

The Somerset town's early history is an irresolvable mixture of legend and fact. It starts with Joseph of Arimathea, believed to have been the Virgin Mary's uncle. He was a merchant bearing tin from Britain to Phoenicia.

Several independent south England oral tales agree in saying that when Jesus of Nazareth was a young boy, before he proclaimed himself the son of God and began his ministry, he came to Britain with Joseph and stayed briefly at Glastonbury. It was the same Joseph who, years later, received Christ's body from the crucifixion cross and buried it in a sepulchre. Then, forced out of Palestine, Joseph returned to Glastonbury and began preaching Christianity in the year 60.

He arrived at Weary-All Hill, one of several that make up the tongue of land that projects into the marshes here. He drove his staff into the ground and local inhabitants still say it grew into a thorn tree that blossoms twice a year, at Christmas and Easter.

Joseph is reputed to have brought with him the chalice that Christ used at the Last Supper. It is said to be buried in the vicinity of what now is called Chalice Hill, near the mysterious perpetual "Blood Spring."

Schweitzer's Religion Painted Well

By LOUIS CASSELS
United Press International

Dr. Albert Schweitzer, who celebrated his 90th birthday Thursday, is probably the best-known religious figure of the 20th century.

The Jungle Doctor of Lambarene has had more publicity than a movie star. And most of it has been in the key of uncritical adulation. Public opinion polls have repeatedly shown him to be a popular choice for the title, "greatest man in the world."

Lately, the inevitable reaction has set in. Books and articles have begun to appear which question Schweitzer's motives, his competence as a physician, and his religious faith. Some writers have even suggested that Schweitzer cannot properly be called a Christian.

The debunkers seem determined to go as far in one direction as the idolizers have gone in the other.

What is badly needed is an honest, balanced account of this complex man who achieved worldwide renown as a theologian and a musician, and then gave it all up to go to Africa and treat lepers.

Happily, such an account is now at hand. It was written by a German scholar, Dr. Werner Picht. An English translation was published by Harper & Row this week under the title, "The Life and Thought of Albert Schweitzer."

This book is the finest birthday gift Schweitzer could ask. It presents him with sympathy, understanding and insight, but it does not seek to gloss over his shortcomings or deny his blind spots. Picht is a lifelong friend of Schweitzer, but he is too good a scholar to pull his punches.

He makes clear that Schweitzer at Lambarene is performing the same kind of service to suffering humanity that thousands of other medical missionaries are performing in other places, without benefit of publicity or Nobel prizes. He reports that Schweitzer's hospital is not as modern in its techniques and equipment as it might be, and that the doctor sometimes gets very irritated with natives who come to him for treatment and repay him by stealing his supplies.

Picht also acknowledges that Schweitzer has little interest in many orthodox Christian dogmas, and that he frequently makes statements which—taken out of context—might lead one to regard him as an agnostic.

But no one who really knows Schweitzer could ever question his basic commitment to Jesus Christ, Picht says. He quotes Schweitzer:

"A man can be mistaken about what lies above the clouds, about what is above our knowledge and understanding. But if he recognizes the whole spiritual, divine world at the point where it approaches him tangibly in the person of our Lord and Master Jesus, then he has and holds it; and what is more, he has everything, even those things to which his spirit cannot raise itself and which he is unable to believe."

One reason why Schweitzer's profound faith is often misunderstood is that he no longer attaches much importance to rational arguments and theological speculations. It is obedience, not comprehension, he says, that enable men to draw near to God in Christ.

PENDING THE OPENING of her new import business specializing in Haitian art, Larkspur real estate broker Maggi Walker is displaying some of the work she brought back from the Caribbean island in her office at 476 Magnolia Avenue. Along with the colorful paintings, Mrs. Walker also plans to deal in Haitian statues and charms. A voodoo doll hangs beside the painting in the lower photo. Voodoo, she says, is still practiced on the island.

Caribbean Colors Captured On Canvas

Maggi Walker Brings Back Island Art

By BOB COPPOCK

Larkspur will soon be a center of attention for persons interested in the strikingly colorful work of artists of Haiti.

In addition, buyers excited by the occult will be able to pick up a string of voodoo beads or a doll — if real estate broker Maggi Walker's plans materialize.

Mrs. Walker wants to conduct, with the help of a Haitian family, an importing business that would bring works of Haitian artists and craftsmen to the attention of the United States public.

SHE HAS made several trips to the island republic, and was distressed by the abject poverty of the people there, especially since recent political upheavals have scared away the vital tourist trade.

But, Mrs. Walker says she was also impressed by the brilliant color of the country, especially that provided by the local artists.

"They paint right on the walls of the buildings. You see them everywhere you go, especially on the main streets of Port-Au-Prince," she explains.

SHE FIRST visited the country late in 1963, as a side excursion during a trip to Trinidad. She says she found Haiti fascinating.

In 1964 she made three more trips to the area. On one of these she became friends with Edouard Celidor, a tour director whose business had been ruined by political problems and hurricane damage.

Celidor wanted to move to the United States, but so did many other Haitians.

HIS SISTER, Elizane Thermidor, was the first of the family to arrive, in June. Celidor came to Larkspur the day after Christmas. He will operate the import outlet, to be located next door to the realty office at 476 Magnolia Avenue.

On her last trip to Haiti, Mrs. Walker took along enough money to buy a good collection of art work to bring back for sale. She had discovered that she had no trouble selling smaller items she had brought back previously.

The pictures, by some of the island's best known artists, are on display in her office along with some charms and statues.

VOODOO, A combination of native religions and superstitions, is still practiced throughout Haiti, Mrs. Walker says, and perhaps 85 per cent of the people believe in its power, although many such persons may also be practicing Catholics.

However, it has become commercialized, to some extent. And voodoo ceremonies are now being performed for the benefit of tourists, she adds.

REAL ESTATE BROKER Maggi Walker of Larkspur is planning a new business venture—an import enterprise dealing in Haitian art and crafts. She has made several trips to the Caribbean island and was much impressed by the colorful work of the country's artists. From her last journey she brought back a collection of paintings, statues and charms with which she will launch the new business. She shows some of the Haitian work in the picture above and in the inset photograph at left. (Independent-Journal photos by Jim Kean)

"Why Did My White Dress Turn Yellow After Drycleaning"

Many white fabrics change color because of the loss of the brighteners which make fabrics whiter. However, drycleaning does not remove the brightener. Sunlight will dim the brightener and so will home laundry detergents which contain optical bleach, chlorine bleaches or steam from pressing. The reason the loss of color was noticed after drycleaning and not before, was because drycleaning removed the soil which hid the color change.

Because the color change is due to the brightener, itself, it will occur in any fiber—cotton, rayon, acetate, wool, silk or any synthetic fiber. Your drycleaner may be able to re-treat yellowed garments with a brightener, if it is a washable garment. If it is drycleanable, the brightness cannot be restored because suitable brighteners cannot be applied from drycleaning solvents. But if your dress can withstand water treatment, your drycleaner may be able to improve its whiteness. Discuss it with him.

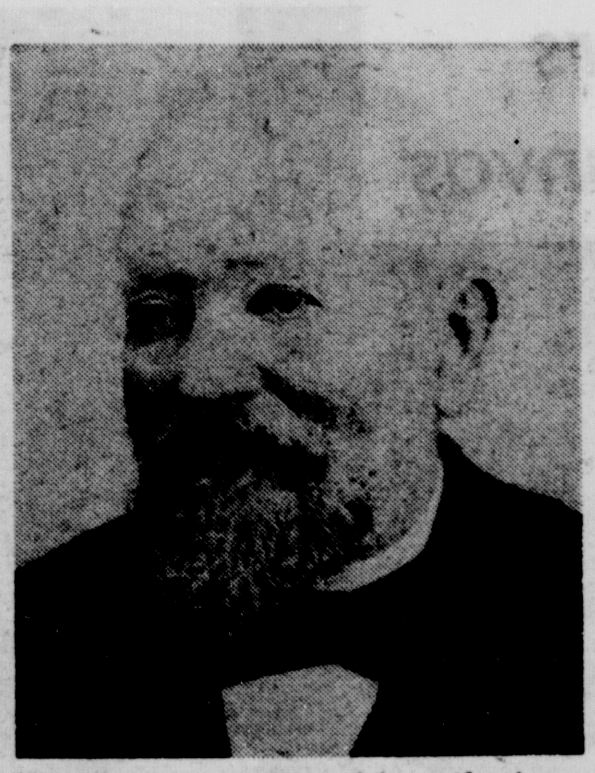
Carrie Pratt Elwell Could Look Back 90 Years In San Rafael

Daughter Of A Pioneer Merchant Recalled Town Of Her Childhood



FREDERICK H. PRATT and his wife, Josephine, daughter of a Spanish don, came to San Rafael in the 1860s, even before the town was incorporated. Here Pratt became a pioneer mercantile business man and one of the young community's first postmasters. Daughter Carrie, born in San Rafael in 1870, lived until early 1964 and in her chats with W. T. Ortman, recalled much that her father had told her about the Marin of a century ago. Those interviews are the basis of the article on these pages.

(Editor's Note: This is another in a series of articles written especially for the Independent-Journal Marin Magazine by San Rafael "oldtimer" W. T. Ortman on early-day incidents and personages of Marin.)

By W. T. ORTMAN

Although Carrie Pratt Elwell left San Rafael as a schoolgirl and died Jan. 31, 1964, in Oakland, she was Marin born, and she remained a Marinite at heart throughout her life.

Carrie Pratt, daughter of Frederick H. Pratt, business man and postmaster of San Rafael, was born in 1870 in the family home at the northwest corner of Fourth and B streets in San Rafael—even before the young community had been incorporated.

She was to serve as a court reporter and librarian and enjoy a successful career in the business world as a financier before she passed away at the age of 94.

AND SHE was to serve as a delightful intermediary between past and present, the source of much interesting and valuable information on the early-day history of her native city and county.

Her father was born in Saybrook, Conn., on April 18, 1824, the son of Titus C. and Elizabeth Pratt. After a common school education, he left home to wander westward, stopping first in Milwaukee where he engaged in business for several years.

IN 1843 HE crossed the Missouri River and traveled southwest into Mexico and Honduras. Then in Nicaragua he stopped to engage in the mercantile business. After several years there, his next venture was in Oregon where he set up a small mercantile firm not far from Grants Pass.

In the winter of 1855, during an Indian massacre, the town—and his store—were burned to the ground. Fred Pratt escaped and came to California, making his way to Spanishtown in Butte County where he once again went into the mercantile business in the spring of 1856.

Spanishtown was on the north fork of the Feather River. It was in Spanish Ravine, emptying into Chub Gulch.

IT HAD BEEN settled in the fall of 1855 by a party of Spanish and Mexicans, most of whom were miners from Sonora. They had been recruited from mines in the Sierra Madre mountains and assembled at Magdalena.

Among the leaders was a Spanish don by the name of Juan Tiementen.

He had come with his parents from Valencia, Spain, as a boy. While a young man in Magdalena, Mexico, he married a senorita from his motherland.

On June 27, 1856, Josephine and Fred were married. To them were born seven children—Alexander, Frances Josephine, Oscar Collins, Edwin W., Frederick W., Carrie and William.

When the gold deposits in Spanish Ravine gave out, the news arrived that there had been a great strike on the Comstock Lode in Nevada. The word so revived the lagging gold fever in Spanishtown as to empty the town of its population to the last soul. They all rushed to the Comstock.

WEARILY, Fred Pratt again loaded his stores aboard a wagon and with his wife and their five children moved down the north fork of the Feather River to Sacramento.

Some weeks later, Fred, walking beside his horses, plodded up the main thoroughfare of San Rafael. He stopped his team at a watering trough in front of the Central Hotel to give them water and then obtained rooms in the hotel for his family.

Within a week Frederick H. Pratt set up a store on Fourth Street and was again in business.

On Oct. 14, 1867, Pratt was appointed postmaster of San Rafael.

"THE POST office was located at Fourth and C at that time," stated his daughter, Carrie, remembering the statements of her father. "It was still the location where the original San Rafael post office had been established in 1851. The first postmaster had been Moses Stoppard."

Carrie Pratt spent the first 10 years of her life in her father's two-story brick house on the northeast corner of Fourth and B. During this time San Rafael was emerging from a "cowtown" atmosphere to a small pueblo of a few buildings and shacks that lined the dusty, deep-rutted old Olema Road along which were driven Mexican longhorn cattle from the James Black and Tim Murphy ranchos to the slaughter house of the Robert C. Clark, Moylan & Scribner meat company at Sim's Landing.

Carrie Pratt was 4 years old when San Rafael was incorporated as a town. At the time the population was only 800 people including many Mexicans, some Indian woodchoppers and a few disillusioned Yankee gold miners from the Sierra.

THERE WERE still a few Spanish dons living on their ranchos in the outlying country.

Many of the settlers in Marin County had come down from the Sierra Nevada when the gold deposits gave out. They never, however, really rid themselves of the gold fever.

"It was in their blood," recalled Carrie Pratt, remembering the stories her father told her. "In May, 1863, someone discovered a small vein of quartz on the John Reed ranch near Sausalito. It may have had a trace of gold. Then, again, it may not have. But the discovery revived the gold fever again, and sent it to heights previously unknown. The gold-maddened Americans in Marin County went completely off the beam. There was a wild rush for claims.

"I DON'T KNOW but what my father was one of them," commented Carrie as we sat on the terrace beneath the oaks at her beautiful home overlooking Oakland and the bay. "For years

THIS WAS SAN RAFAEL in the early 1860s, about the time that Frederick H. Pratt brought his family to the community and entered into the mercantile business. It was then a "cowtown" of dirt roads and plank sidewalks. And Carrie Pratt Elwell, remembering back nearly 90 years, could recall that her father's home, in the heart of the town, boasted grounds spacious enough for the raising of horses, poultry, a cow and a vegetable garden.

San Rafael In The 1870s

Carrie Pratt Remembered Early Town

there was a list of names among his effects of those who had secured claims. Some of the names I remember — Rev. S. Looten, Robert C. Clark, J. Angellette and John Simmons. Nothing ever came of this, my father told me. And although it was before my time, still I remember many of these men."

The last time I visited Carrie Pratt Elwell at her sylvan retreat in the East Oakland hills was in 1963. She was much enfeebled. One of her hands was useless as she had experienced a mild stroke.

CARRIE PRATT could still remember back to her early childhood in San Rafael very well.

She spoke much of San Rafael, remembering vividly the quiet little town with its dirt roads and the hitching posts along the curb.

The buildings along the two business streets were mostly two-story structures with, in many cases, wooden porches extending out to the edge of the sidewalk. The walks were at first of redwood planks, and restricted to the business section. Out Fourth Street beyond D were only dirt paths on either side of the road.

TRAVEL WAS sparse. Here and there a buggy or a surrey would go by. Once in a while a farmer would come to town in a wagon drawn by a team of horses and tie up in front of her father's store.

Her home, of course, was the focal point around which her young life revolved in the 1870s.

"My father's home was a large, two-story house made of brick. It was, with the exception of the Central Hotel, a three-story structure, then the largest building in town," stated Carrie Pratt. "He built it to house both his business and our home. Upstairs were large rooms, and all in French decor with marble fireplaces throughout.

"BUT THE best of all our possessions was the block-size piece of land which father owned. It included everything a ranch should have, in those days. It contained a stable with horses; a buggy and a three-seated carriage with a fringe on top, called a surrey; a flock of geese, chickens, and a vegetable garden. Our cow furnished cream for our own butter."

Here Carrie smiled.

"I was the milkmaid who carried buttermilk to Dr. A. W. Taliaferro, a refreshment he was very fond of. He was a pioneer who came to San Rafael with the Virginia mining company . . . a country doctor who was at the peak of his very useful career in those days. There was a shortage of dentists, so Doctor Taliaferro pulled teeth along with caring for our other ills."

"As a child I would sit at the window of my father's house, look across the street to where now stands the Crocker-Citizens bank, and watch the Chinese coolies plant onions for the San Francisco market," she said.

THE YOUNG LIBARIAN Carrie Pratt Elwell had good reason to be proud of the Paris gown she wore in this photo. She had won it as first prize in an essay contest conducted by a San Francisco newspaper.

"I WAS STILL only a child when the courthouse was finished," she went on. "I have only a child's memory of those things I liked about the courthouse. Not withstanding the play possibilities I had on my father's ranch-like place, my greatest delight was the lawn surrounding the courthouse. There I played house under the trees and interviewed the prisoners in the jail as they looked out through the tight bars.

"Talking to a little girl was great fun for them, too.

"The sprawling courthouse lawn was full of mushrooms. I ate some and took some home to mother. She was horrified, insisting they were toadstools and poisonous. Consequently, she gave me some medicine I never forgot."

DURING MY visits to Carrie Pratt's home in East Oakland, I learned much of her background.

Carrie Pratt's aunt, Caroline Tiementen, an older sister of her mother, Josephine, was married to a mine owner named Salajor. Her daughter, Caroline Salajor, was Mrs. Gordon Frank Glidden and lived at Second and B streets. She was godmother to Carrie and named her Caroline Josephine Pratt.

These people have all passed from the scene. The only surviving descendent of this gold-seeking group of 49ers now alive that I know of is Mrs. Ida Glidden Toriati. She lives in San Juan Bautista.

IDA GREW up in San Rafael and was graduated from the St. Raphael School. She came to San Rafael with her parents in 1901, and was well known in town. Old-timers will remember her as the "candy girl" at the Columbus Candy store. Later, she became telephone supervisor at the local exchange.

I asked Carrie if she had known William T. Coleman who lived in San Rafael during her youth.

"Oh yes," replied Carrie with delight at being reminded of that gentleman. "Mr. Coleman's son, Bobbie, and I went to the same private school. He would walk home with me en route to his own home, only a few blocks away.

"ALSO IN the 1870s," Carrie continued, "the great war had not been over very long and on Decoration Day people in great numbers would go to the cemetery and decorate the soldiers' graves."

During my last visit to Carrie

I asked if she remembered Dr. Galen Burdell. I asked because his sister, Adeline Burdell, was my grandmother, and I was curious about the old gentleman.

"He was well-known in San Rafael," stated Carrie. "Somehow, he reminded me of a southern plantation owner. He lived at the Olompali Rancho near Novato. There the doctor maintained a beautiful Roman-style villa with veranda on his 30,000-acre estate.

"THE BASIC business of the rancho was dairying. However, Doctor Burdell gave more attention to a small vineyard near the villa. He much preferred being known as a viticulturist. This, perhaps, was due to his ancestors being vineyardists in Bordeaux, France.

"There were also other families in the vicinity of the Olompali Ranch whom I remember. One was the Robert C. Clark family. They lived on the old Ramon Mesa Rancho west of Novato. Robert Clark had bought this property, which consisted of about 4,000 acres, at a tax sale in San Rafael. He was accidentally killed on his ranch in 1872 by a runaway team of horses. Two of his children who were with him in the wagon were badly hurt but recovered.

"The other two families were the Francis DeLong and John Sweetzer people at Novato. They, too, had immense land holdings where they grew vegetables, particularly cabbage, and much fruit. The Sweetzer apples were crushed for a cider that captured the market."

"Out in front of father's store was a wooden post set in the sidewalk," she continued. "It was about five feet high and on the top it had a small, foot-square platform. On the top of this post, father had a live monkey. We called him Joco. He created much fun for the children as they passed the store."

Later, as a young lady, she went to work for the Alameda Statesman as a stenographer.

"In 1892," related Carrie, "James Barber started the newspaper with three employees —himself, his stenographer and a printer. I was paid $15 a month. We lasted about two years, then closed the doors.

"My father was up in Del Norte County. He had a timber claim on Mill Creek. I went up there and lived in Crescent City, working as a court reporter."

CARRIE PRATT did not remain in Del Norte County long. At the turn of the century she came back to the Bay Area.

"I wanted to establish myself as a writer," she explained. "I wanted a position that would place me in a literary environment. I filed an application for a place in the Alameda Public Library."

It was during this period she met Frank D. Elwell, scion of a socially prominent Bay Area family and a relative of the Albert Dibbles of Ross Valley. Frank had distinguished himself as a civil engineer.

FRANK AND Carrie fell in love. They married and honeymooned in Yosemite Valley.

Upon their return to the Bay Area, they took up residence in Alameda. Frank had a business office in Oakland. During the year following their marriage Frank obtained a piece of land in the East Oakland foothills. It was to be the site of their future home.

Frank had only the foundation laid when he was called to the Orient. The new Chinese republic was in the process of tying together the provinces with up-to-date communications.

FRANK ELWELL was put in charge of a railroad project. He remained in China three years, then returned home.

In May of 1904 Carrie Pratt won an essay contest and the prize was an imported gown from Paris. The San Francisco Bulletin had offered the prize for the best analysis of the character of Volga Mikolanda, the heroine of the serial, "Another Maid of Orleans."

FRANK ELWELL finished his home in the East Oakland hills. He and Carrie had just moved in and settled down when Frank was again called to the Orient. This time he was away five years.

He came back home a man broken in health. Malaria and malnutrition had so wracked his body that Frank Elwell was scarcely recognizable as the same man who had left Oakland. He lived only a few months, then died.

WHEN THE war years passed, the economy of the United States mounted. Business and finance knew no bounds. As industry expanded, the stock market climbed to dizzy heights.

Carrie Pratt caught the stock-market fever and invested her small savings. In a short time she became accustomed to the market, buying and selling, doubling her purchases and pyramiding her earnings.

The people turned and went back to their gambling. Not so with Carrie Pratt. She sold out.

CARRIE PRATT ELWELL of East Oakland was an important source of information about early-day San Rafael. Born here in 1870, she spent her early years in this city. And until her death in early 1964, at the age of 94, she could recall with clarity incidents that had occurred in her childhood, and stories told her by her father of even earlier happenings.

My visit with Carrie Pratt Elwell in 1963 took place only a few months before she passed away. I found her sitting beside a typewriter. Her left hand lay helpless in her lap—paralyzed by the stroke. She was using a forefinger of her right hand to type a letter.

SHE LOOKED up with a smile on her face.

Now Carrie Pratt Elwell is gone.

In her will, when it was read, found among her various bequests was a token of her love of the giant redwood trees among which she had lived so many years. She requested that $225,000 from her estate be given to "The League of the Friends of the Redwood Trees" to be used for the protection and maintenance of the redwoods of California.

ONE OF Carrie Pratt Elwell's fondest recollections of early San Rafael was of the monkey, Joco, who, posted on a platform in front of her father's store and home, used to entertain the passers-by. Children, in particular, loved the lively little monkey.

AS THE CALIFORNIA State Legislature opens its 1965 session, Assemblyman William T. Bagley of San Rafael, Republican, was at his desk on the Assembly floor, ready for what was certain to be a long and turbulent session. Bagley was re-elected in November for his third term as the Marin-Sonoma representative in the Assembly in Sacramento. (Associated Press photo)

Marin's Man In The State Assembly

William T. Bagley Is Representative Of A New Breed In The Legislature

By WAT TAKESHITA

Assemblyman William Thompson Bagley, 36, Republican from San Rafael, represents a new breed of citizen legislators who bear little resemblance to the professional politician as stereotyped through political cartoons.

AN ATTRACTIVE college-educated secretary, Diane Oldham of San Rafael, takes your message if he's out or ushers you in to greet the assemblyman. Or more likely, Bill Bagley will step up to greet you, because he is no stickler for formalities and is always on the go.

He is trim, neat, and has a boyish grin that radiates optimism. Like the attorney that he is, he runs his legislative office with precision and dispatch.

He is the very antithesis of the paunchy politician, lolling back in a swivel chair with cigar in mouth and feet on desk.

DURING TWO previous terms in the State Assembly, Bagley has rubbed elbows and traded blows with veterans of political infighting. But through it all, he has retained his homespun traits —enthusiasm, cheerful optimism and sense of humor—with which he first waded into the legislature back in 1960 as a young man of 32.

Then as now, he sees politics as an honorable profession where bossism and political favoritism should play no part.

Political appointments of inheritance tax appraisers, which he calls the "last vestige of the old spoils system," is one of his chief targets. He is also a champion of "purity of elections" — by requiring politicians to reveal campaign contributions and telling how much was donated and by whom.

BAGLEY LOVES and lives politics, but has not become engulfed by it.

In between his legislative duties in Sacramento, he gets a Marin citizen's perspective on life by carrying on his San Rafael law practice and by tramping through the hills of Marin where he grew up.

ASSEMBLYMAN Bagley is no political fence straddler. He didn't wait in the Barry Goldwater-Nelson Rockefeller scrap or the Proposition 14 battle to see which way the political winds would blow.

He thus made some enemies, even in his own party. But he makes his choice, wades in, and lets the chips fall where they may.

BORN IN Woodacre on June 29, 1928, he attended St. Raphael's School and San Rafael High School, where he was student body president in 1945. In 1949, he graduated from University of California at Berkeley as class president, valedictorian and a Phi Beta Kappa.

He married the former Doris L. Law of San Rafael in 1949.

Three years later, he completed his studies at Boalt School of Law and entered private practice.

HIS FATHER, N. J. Baglietto, was formerly in the banking business and later ran a jewelry store across the street from the Rafael Theater in San Rafael.

All during his high school and seven years in college, Bill Bagley worked in his spare time with the Marin County Fire Department at Woodacre, carrying hoses and driving trucks.

IT WAS this rural upbringing and his work with the fire department that took him into the hunting and fishing areas of the county.

He still treasures "the first gun I got," a 20-gauge, double-barreled shotgun, which he acquired 20 years ago.

He has three children, Bill Jr.; Walter, 7; and Lynn, 12.

BAGLEY AND his wife were divorced last March, reaching a settlement agreeable to both. He still visits his children regularly at the family home on Fairhills Drive, where they live with their mother.

Bagley's first active role in politics started with the Young Republicans. In 1956, he was general counsel and a director of the California Young Republicans, and headed the Marin YRs the following year.

HE WAS vice president of the first Marin Republican Assembly and later became vice president of the California Republican Assembly.

In 1958, Bagley headed the Marin campaigns for Lt. Gov. Harold J. Powers and Caspar W. Weinberger, candidate for attorney general.

When Assemblyman Richard H. McCollister retired in 1960, Bagley ran for the post, beating out Everett Matzen in the general election. Two years later, he defeated Robert D. Carrow of Novato, and in 1964 scored an easy win over James E. Pockrus of Rohnert Park.

IN THE JUNE primary last year, he stumped for Rockefeller, and in the November finals, campaigned up and down the state for Sen. George Murphy.

BAGLEY HAS fought against tax increases, particularly against what he considers abuses in welfare aid.

In his campaign to put inheritance tax appraisers on civil service, Bagley has produced figures which he says demonstrate that it would save the state more than three million dollars annually.

In the field of human relations, Bagley voted for nondiscrimination in housing. He sees the need for some state agency to continue in the role of negotiation and conciliation.

"LOCALLY, WE have such agencies as the Human Rights Commission," said Bagley. "I think it is completely legitimate that the state should also try to do something toward the solution of the racial problem."

The Rumford Act went further than other fair housing laws "by saying that if you don't comply, we'll hit you over the head," says Bagley.

As he sees it, the people rejected the penalty phase of the Rumford Act, not the principle of fair housing itself.

BAGLEY'S STAND on controversial issues no doubt lost him some votes. But in the process, he must have picked up more. For in overall support, Bagley keeps gaining strength.

In the Seventh Assembly District (Marin and Sonoma) where total registration is predominantly Democratic, Bagley outpolled his Democratic opponents by about 20,000 in 1960, some 27,000 two years later, and by a whopping 41,000 votes last November.

It's 'Hairstyling' Now Instead Of 'Haircuts' For The Males

When the man went to the barbershop, he went there for a haircut—period.

None of that fancy stuff for him.

Feature articles in national magazines and in the metropolitan press have taken note of the new trend toward personalized hairstyles for the men—and particularly, toward the new technique in which the hair is "sculptured" by the razor instead of snipped and trimmed with shears and clippers.

"The Continental Razor Cut" it's called in the barber trade. And it's available in Marin, too.

Younger barbers, in particular, have been studying the technique by which the masculine head is first subjected to a shampoo, then "sculptured" with the razor, and finally wave blown and brushed for the final effect.

"Men are becoming more aware of their appearance and are demanding a style of hair that is more personalized," explains Ed Lopez of Whalen's Barber & Beauty Shop in San Anselmo, one of the young Marin barbers who has mastered the European methods.

So the day when the man could plop into the barber's chair and order "the works" when he wants a shave and a haircut may be coming to an end.

He's liable to wind up with a "continental razor cut"—and with a slight extra charge on the tab for his visit to the barbershop.

Haircuts With The Razor—In The Continental Manner

Camp Tamarancho Prepares To Better Serve Our Youth

Facilities Are Added, But The Basic Wilderness Atmosphere Undisturbed

By DON KEOWN

The Marin Council, Boy Scouts of America, will be holding its annual meeting Tuesday evening in its offices in San Rafael.

A traditional part of that dinner event, along with the installation of officers, is the annual report.

And a major portion of this year's report is certain to be devoted to the capital improvement program at the Scouts' Tamarancho wilderness camp near Fairfax.

FROM A special $253,000 capital fund raised in 1962, approximately $190,000 has been spent to date for improvements at Tamarancho, and at the Marin Sierra Camp at Emigrant Gap.

THROUGH THE area flows Cascade Creek. A two-acre lake adds to the beauty of the site.

THE ADDITIONS under the development program made possible by the monies raised in 1962 include:

A combination home for Ranger Gerald Fullerton and his wife, and office for the camp. First unit in the improvement program, the ranger station was completed in April of 1963. The building is ideally situated at the entrance of Tamarancho so as to command a sweeping view of the wilderness camp.

Two "rough weather shelters" for the unpredictable winter and spring weather. These rough structures are not designed as sleeping quarters, but rather as places where the boys can engage in activity programs during periods of heavy rainfall. Two more such shelters are planned.

A workshop, near the ranger station and almost as large as that building. There camp equipment, small buildings, boats, etc., are made.

A SEPARATE section of Tamarancho that has been developed as Cub Land and set aside for the younger Cub Scouts. A small fort, named Fort Dunn for Paul Y. Dunn, scout executive for the Marin Council, is a feature of this play and activity area.

A new lookout tower for water safety purposes at the lake. Some improvements have also been made on the lake itself, but additional work is planned to make the water more suitable for swimming and other sports.

Two new water tanks plus a system of springs and thousands of yards of pipe to serve the entire camp. The water system has proven to be one of the most expensive projects in the improvement program.

FIVE NEW latrines added to those already available, so that there are now 14 usable troop sites in Tamarancho.

NEW PICNIC tables, washstands, recreational equipment.

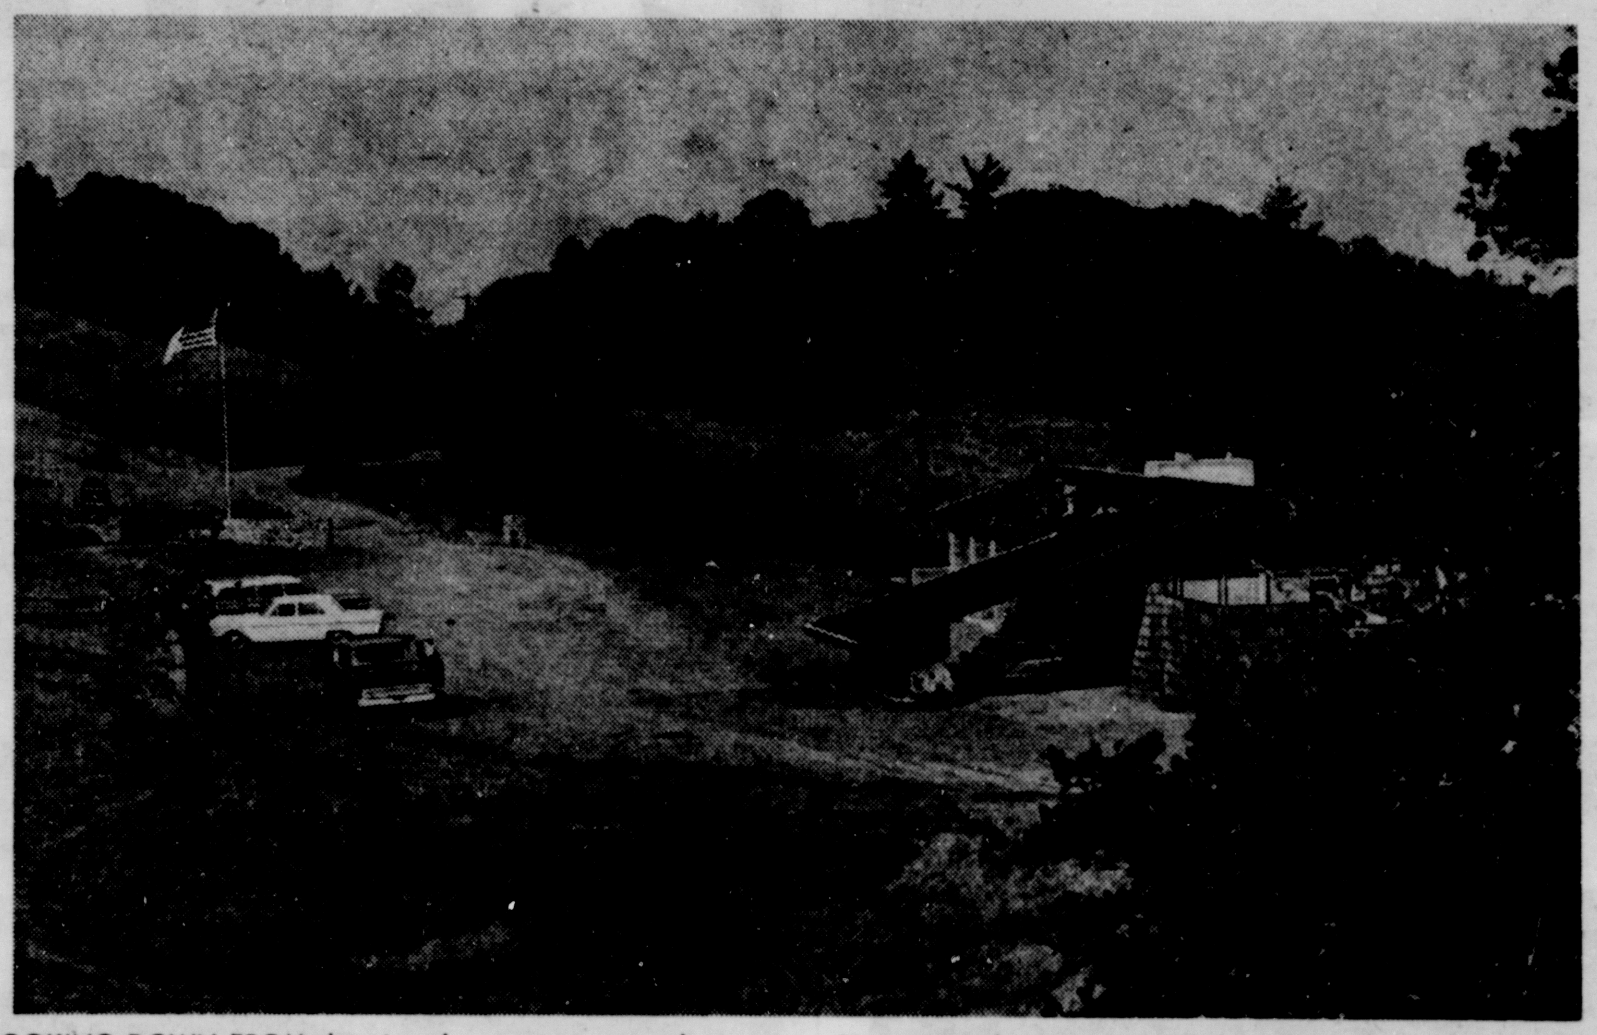
Expenditures from the capital fund have been made, Dunn explains, in such a way as to benefit all the age groups within the Scouting program, and to encompass as many of their interests as possible.

"Our approach has been to provide them with facilities that will serve for fun purposes and at the same time also assist us in developing the mental and physical characteristics and the skills that are the ultimate aim of Boy Scouting," Dunn said.

AND AT ALL times, the basic role of Tamarancho as a wilderness camping area has remained foremost in the minds of the Scout officials.

Thus, perhaps the most important of all the facilities in the camp are the trees, growth, the terrain and the wildlife which Mother Nature has provided.

And the trails, including one of 14 miles, another of five miles, that enable the boys to hike through the unspoiled beauty and enjoy their wilderness surroundings.



LOOKING DOWN FROM the signal tower, you see the entrance to the Tamarancho camp of the Marin Council, Boy Scouts of America, with its parking area. The building at right serves as the camp office as well as the home of Ranger and Mrs. Gerald Fullerton. Extensive improvements have been made at the camp under a special capital outlay program, but special attention has been paid to preserving the natural feeling of the wooded, hilly area.

THIS NEW RANGE for small bore rifle target shooting was constructed at the Boy Scouts' Tamarancho after the former range had to give way to a site for the new craft corral and trading post. The range is National Rifle Assn. and National Council of Boy Scouts approved. The sport is a popular one with the boys.

The Boys Of Troop 67 At Camp

IN THIS NEW WORKSHOP, machinery and tools have been installed for the making of camp equipment, canoes, etc. The lumber stored outside is building material for future projects.

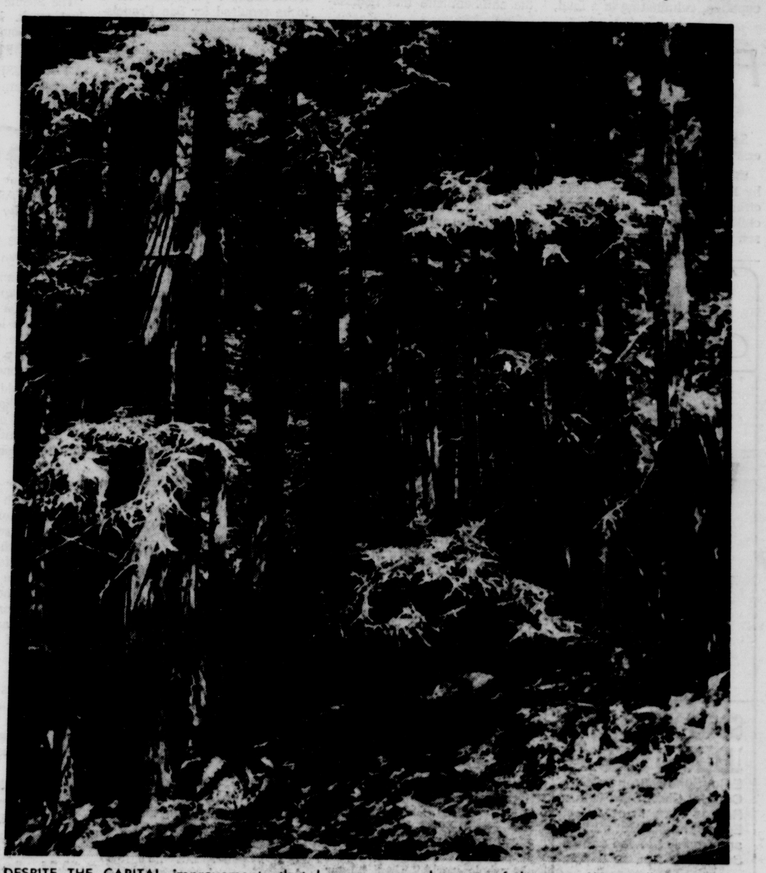
New Facilities For Tamarancho

THE THUNDERBIRD TOTEM, 30 feet high, looks down with approval as Scoutmaster Bob Joy Sr. of Boy Scout Troop 67 administers the oath during ceremonies conducted in the new campfire circle at Tamarancho camp.

BEFORE ONE OF THE rough weather shelters constructed in Tamarancho, scouts, left to right, Bob Joy Jr., Bob Owens, Norm Doolittle, Bill Reimer, George Reimer, Greg Davis and Karl Doolittle prepare a campfire. Two of the shelters have been completed, two more are planned. They are for activity and dining use during times of heavy rain, but not for sleeping. The scouts sleep in tents.



DESPITE THE CAPITAL improvements that have been made at Tamarancho, a determined effort has been made to maintain the essential wilderness character of the area. How well that effort has succeeded is reflected in this photo of one of the Tamarancho trails.

A Survivor Recalls The Horror Of Nazi Death Camps For Jews

By DON KEOWN

There are those who insist that the dark years of Nazi persecution and then mass murder of the Jews and other minorities are best forgotten, and even that the tormented should forgive their tormentors.

The sheer fatuity of such suggestions becomes apparent when one reads an account such as Alexander Donat's "The Holocaust Kingdom," and begins to realize the extent of the horror inflicted by German Fascism upon its helpless victims.

The barbarity practiced by a so-called civilized people in the warped philosophy of racial superiority makes the very terms "forget" and "forgive" an affront to common sense. Even now, we are shocked by "atrocities" inflicted by primitive Congolese. For how many decades would the Congolese have to continue their massacres at their present pace to approach the slaughter recorded by the "cultured" master race in the 1930s and 1940s?

Donat's book breaks down into two parts: First, life in the Warsaw ghetto during the Nazi occupation, culminating in a final, desperate resistance by the Jews to their bloodthirsty oppressors; and then, the life, or bare existence that followed in the concentration and death camps where every 24 hours of survival was a triumph.

Donat's account is all the more impressive in that he has not gilded his facts. The truth is terrible and terrifying.

He attributes to the Jews no special propensity for individual and audacious acts of heroism. Bare survival, in itself, took superhuman courage in the face of unspeakable brutality and indignities. There were, to be sure, acts of bravery. But for the most part, conditions were too desperate to permit other than the most basic acts of survival.

He takes frank recognition of the anti-Semitism that flourished among the Poles, making it possible for them to endure, indeed for some of them to rejoice at, the systematic extinction of their Jews. And Polish, Ukranian and Russian guards—even Jewish collaborators and petty camp officials—rivaled the SS itself in cruelty to the prisoners.

Journalist Donat's book is the very personal story of his family's dogged, successful efforts to survive the holocaust. But it also provides a shocking picture of the tragedy of the millions and millions who did not survive.

Forget and forgive, indeed! Donat makes no pretense that he has done so. And if mankind's memory and conscience are such that he can, in two short decades, bury guilts unparalleled in all history, then he is a poor creature, for sure. Better he read such books as Donat's, and keep in mind that savagery has not been and is not now confined to African tribesmen, or even to the Communists and those inspired by that drab doctrine.

SEPARATE judgments seem to be required for San Franciscan James Leigh's novel, "What Can You Do?"

For writing technique, we think an unqualified verdict of approval is required. Leigh has written on a level that is often dazzling in its brilliance.

As to content, a greater disparity of opinion can be expected.

"What Can You Do?" is the story of Phil Fuller, college freshman, complete cynic and a teen-ager whose only commitments are to his personal pleasure and advantage, and to the sexual conquest of each and every female he encounters.

The book is one extended chronicle of Phil Fuller's adventures in sex, described in explicit detail. His partners range from callow and not-so-callow teen-age girls to unhappily married middle-age matrons. The dustjacket compares Phil with Tom Jones, and the comparison is apt. And as with other books of this genre, some are certain to condemn it as pornography.

But Leigh has written his book with exceptional style, with great humor and spirit, and with a wonderful measure of insight.

The rebelliousness of certain segments of American youth, such as that recently demonstrated on the University of California campus has worried many of us. Leigh offers his readers a view of another category among our youth—the undedicated. His young man without a cause, except himself and his pleasure, is a fascinating character. But he is also a worrisome one. After meeting Phil Fuller, even the most staid among the older generations may find rebels with a cause or causes more appealing than they once thought them.

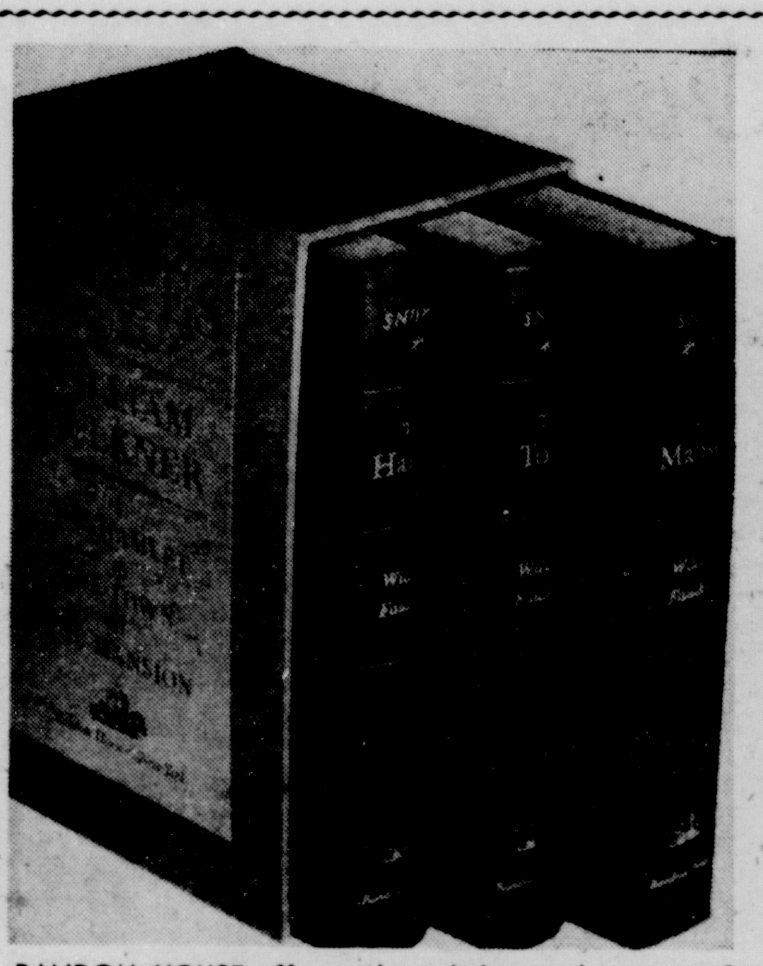
"What Can You Do?" is funny, shocking, tragic and provocative all at the same time. And, in our opinion, a darned good novel.

Leigh has accorded his character a less subtle, less sympathetic treatment than that given his cast by John Nichols in his "The Sterile Cuckoo," reviewed last week. But they are both writing about the rootless among our young people.

FOR SUSPENSE novel fans, Donald Hamilton, who wrote an excellent series of Matt Helm spy thriller yarns, has a new Fawcett Gold Medal paperback original, "Line of Fire." It's his eleventh Gold Medal book.

COLLIER Books has published a new 95-cent paperback revised edition of Jack Raymond's "Your Military Obligations and Opportunities" for young men and women about to enter, or already in, the armed forces.



RANDOM HOUSE offers a boxed three-volume set of William Faulkner novels under the title "Snopes—A Triology." The novels are "The Hamlet," "The Town" and "The Mansion."

For The Children—

By CLAUDIA ROYAL

Some new books for the smaller readers:

"Eyes, Nose, Fingers, Toes" by Ruth Krauss (Harper, $2.50) offers realism for the youngest children. Ruth Krauss made herself known earlier with "A Hole is to Dig" and "A Very Special House." She speaks in words of the small child and tells of their antic nonsense in lyrical language.

In "Whistle for Willie" (Viking, $3.50) award-winner Ezra Jack Keats tells the story of small boy Peter who wants to learn to whistle. Finally, after persistent practice and blowing of the cheeks until they were tired, came out a whistle. Keats' love of life and children shows in this book. Illustrations are vivid and very attractive, as he uses a collage art form in which different shapes and colors bring about a balance between illusion and reality. All children can appreciate "Whistle for Willie."

"Dandelion" by Don Freeman (Viking, $3) is about a lovable and laughable lion who has some exciting experiences as he prepares for a party at Jennifer Giraffe's. First a haircut, a shampoo, and wave for his mane, then to the tailor for a jacket, cap and cane. But Dandelion finds that all this "fanciness" leads to frustration, and he vows: "I will never again try to turn myself into a stylish dandy." Full page pictures are in color and lend humor to the book.

Unlike many "easy to read" or "beginner" books, "Red Fox and His Canoe" by Nathaniel Benchley (Harper, $1.95) is filled with adventure and fun. Little Indian boy Red Fox finds that three bears, a raccoon, two otters and a moose are too much for anybody's canoe even though it may be "the biggest canoe in the whole world." Droll humor runs throughout the tale and colored pictures of one and two-page spreads enliven the book.

THE FAR SIDE OF THE DOLLAR by Ross Macdonald, Alfred A. Knopf Inc., 247 pages, $3.95. Reviewed by Don Keown.

Californian Ross Macdonald has built up a large and loyal following for his mystery novels that are a less disciplined version of the kind of hard-boiled crime story in which Raymond Chandler once excelled.

Macdonald's stories are more complex than most, having a larger cast of major characters, a more involved plot and a greater concern with social values.

"The Far Side of the Dollar" begins with the disappearance of a boy from a private reform school. It soon becomes something much more serious — namely extortion and murder. And private eye Lew Archer is the man who must untangle the web, exposing, as he does so, the flaws and foibles of some elements of Southern California society.

"The Far Side of the Dollar" seems to us markedly superior to Macdonald's last previous effort, "The Chiller," which was generally admired, but which more exhausted than entertained us. This is a good one, fast-paced and yet well delineated.

WITH INTENT TO KILL by George Harmon Coxe, Alfred A. Knopf Inc., 180 pages, $3.95. Reviewed by Frank Farrara.

Hubbard, then, is a welcome change from half-bad, half-good villains who have been palmed off on readers as victims of society.

The setting in the coastal town of Belize in British Honduras particularly lends itself to the story; the end of the road for a search that started in New York City.

Hubbard tracks his intended victim to Belize, but the outcome is not what he expected. It's enough, however, to keep the reader interested to the last page.

Our Reviewers And The New Reading

Other Worlds

WE ARE NOT ALONE by Walter Sullivan, McGraw-Hill, 325 pages, $6.95. Reviewed by Jeff Greer.

The book's theme shines through with journalistic directness in its subtitle—"The search for intelligent life on other worlds."

The fascination, though, comes with Sullivan's reporting of how carefully assembled are the logical building blocks which cause serious scientists to feel sure that other suns have their planets and their thinking beings. No imaginative, science-fiction stuff here.

Sullivan, award-winning science editor for the venerable New York Times and chronicler of the recent International Geophysical Year and America's Antarctic expeditions, traces science's thoughts of extraterrestrial life, from the days of the classic Greeks—to tomorrow.

He tells how radio-astronomers are listening for signals that may have been traveling through space for centuries, and how symbol languages are being devised and argued, for sending back our own messages, as well as for decoding "theirs."

Sullivan recites thoughtful persons' concern for the impact on society of proof that "we are not alone," and delves into the religious thinking, too. He tells of opinions that some far star's brilliant beings may be incomparably more benign than ourselves—or incredibly less moral.

The author personally finds it uplifting that "we cannot yet be sure whether or not it (life on other planets) lies within reach, but in any case we are a part of it all; we are not alone!"

Dennis Again

THE JOYOUS SEASON by Patrick Dennis, Harcourt, Brace and World, 230 pages, $4,75. Reviewed by Barbara Hosmer.

It's told through the eyes of the 10-year-old son Kerry, with the aid of his precocious little sister, whose histrionics add considerably to the episodes. The children are shuffled from one parent's well-intentioned escapade to the other's, with interim visits to strong-willed grandmothers.

When the families of both parents converge on the New York apartment, along with the gifts they bring a carload of eccentricities which are heated to white-hot hilarity when Kerry's first experiment with his uncle's aged chemistry set rocks the tower. And while it never gets quite that hot again, the story has its amusing scenes dominated by a collection of double-strength characters.

Armenian Hero

THE DAREDEVILS OF SASSOUN by Leon Surmelian, Alan Swallow, 279 pages, $5. Reviewed by Bill Hendricks.

Not everyone will enjoy this book, and yet it is one that fulfills a function: To chronicle the poetic legacy of the Armenian people. Told somewhat stiffly in a series of cycles or books, it follows the travels and travails of its hero, David, through a tapestry of history. Baghdad, Egypt, Tehran, Tabriz, the Caucasus evoke a mystic Near-Eastern image and the fervor and poetic touches of the author serve to bring the book to life.

The research and translation are unusual in that the story of the Armenians and their hero had to be rebuilt almost word by word from songs and folklore.

Literary Feud

MARK TWAIN AND BRET HARTE by Margaret Duckett, University of Oklahoma Press, 344 pages, $6.95. Reviewed by Bryce W. Anderson.

The feud between Mark Twain and Bret Harte, who were warm friends when both were beginning their literary careers in San Francisco, has long been familiar in the literary world.

Mostly, accounts of the feud have been based on Twain's "Eruptions" in which he could say no good word of the writer-editor who was once his mentor.

Margaret Duckett, associated professor of English at University of Seattle, has delved into the histories and letters of both Harte and Twain. In "Mark Twain and Bret Harte" she comes up with the conclusion that the feud was mostly one-sided: Twain feuded with Harte but Harte refused to feud back.

Also, she nails the fraudulence of many of Twain's more defamatory remarks about Harte. And she offers evidence that, despite his greater success, much of Twain's hatred for Harte stemmed from envy.

In diminishing Twain, Miss Duckett has enlarged Harte to somewhat more than life size. But her work should put to rest some of the grosser calumnies heaped upon the author of "The Luck of Roaring Camp," etc. (in whom San Rafael can feel a bit of proprietary interest, since he was married here).

"Slide Rule" is the autobiography of author Nevil Shute in the exciting pioneer days of flight when he is an aviation engineer and designer. He recalls the planes in the period between wars when they were small and easily built, and when there were still fresh things to be learned on every flight.

The plot has to do mainly with the building, in England, of the airships R100 and R101 and of the disastrous flight of the latter.

San Anselmo Seminary Lecture Series Presented In Book Form

THE CHURCH AND THE EXPLODING METROPOLIS, edited by Robert Lee, John Knox Press, 125 pages, $1.50. Reviewed by Clayton K. Harrop.

This book consists of a series of articles based on lectures presented at the Institute of Ethics and Society at San Francisco Theological Seminary , San Anselmo, in 1963.

As such, it deals with one of the most critical problems in present-day American life, the tremendous growth of the urban population with the consequent difficulties this presents for the churches.

The first article is by Robert Lee, Margaret S. Dollar professor of Christian social ethics and director of the Institute of Ethics and Society at San Francisco Theological Seminary. In it he seeks to give the setting for all that follows.

Not only does he set forth some of the realities concerning cities, but he raises questions of deep importance for religion. The continuing rapid trend toward urbanization is pointed out along with the related rise of suburbia and the development of the "megalopolis," a metropolitan region or regional city, 22 of which are developing.

The emphasis is that this growth must not be divorced from religion.

ROBERT LEE
Realities and questions

The next two articles present the theological and the biblical view of the city. In the first, Robert W. Spike, of Union Theological Seminary, shows that the Reformation cities reflect a theological viewpoint. Today the metropolis is sure to be the arena where the major theological battles will be fought. In the second, James Mullenburg, professor of Old Testament at San Francisco Theological Seminary, traces Old Testament references to the city.

William Petersen, professor of sociology at the University of California, points out that the center of Protestantism has always been the rural area. This has resulted in an anti-urban emphasis on the part of Protestantism. He holds that while Roman Catholicism feels quite at home in the city, Protestantism has not yet made the city part of its world.

Harold Gilliam, special consultant to the Secretary of the Interior, uses San Francisco and the Bay Area as his example in suggesting that the modern metropolis grows more on the basis of desire for profits than through proper planning.

The last two articles suggest church strategy.

Joseph H. Fichter, professor of sociology at Loyola University of the South, New Orleans, presents the Roman Catholic viewpoint, and William R. Grace, co-ordinator of the Inner-City Church Council of San Francisco, the Protestant. His most significant question is "What is God's change in a world of change?" He sees three things as evidence of God's activity in the city: The poor, the minority, and the resurrection in urban rather than rural terms.

This book presents a variety of viewpoints. For the individual who is at all interested in the most pressing problems facing the church today, it is a challenging work and merits the attention of such readers.

Stereo Hi-Fi

By C. J. Catania
Audio Engineer

A week before Christmas, the CBS personnel called and asked if I would appear as a guest on their Spectrum 74 program on January 3rd. Of course I was delighted and accepted the invitation. On the Sunday afternoon of January 3rd, I found myself in the CBS studio answering questions that were coming in by telephone. The questions were on stereo, components, commercial sets, ham radios, tape recorders, cabinets for stereo, background music speakers, kits, transistors versus tubes, selection of speakers, selection of components, etc. The phone calls came in from all parts of the Bay Area. I answered the questions as best I could, and thoroughly enjoyed my experience. It brought back memories of the days when I worked as a studio engineer in one of the early FM stations.

Because there were so many questions, it made me wonder if there were questions that you here in Marin may have concerning any phase of sound. So, if any of you have questions that you would like answered, please drop me a card, and include your name and phone number. Any questions that I feel will be of general interest I will answer in this column. However, all questions will be answered by telephone or by letter.

."WORLD'S LARGEST STADIUM SOUND SYSTEM GOES INTO HOUSTON'S NEW PLASTIC-DOMED STADIUM. IT'S ALTEC, of course!" Houston's new all-weather stadium covers 9½ acres of land. The clear span of its plastic dome is 642 feet (longer than 2 football fields laid end-to-end). The top of the dome soars 208 feet (high enough to hold an 18-story building), with seating for up to 66,000 fans. Football, baseball, boxing, conventions, exhibits, even rodeos and livestock shows, will be held there.

THE KURT WEILL CLASSICS: "Lady in the Dark" and "Down in the Valley" — RCA Victor Vintage Series LPV-503:

Gertrude Lawrence was one of the most charming figures to grace the Broadway stage, and Weill's "Lady in the Dark" was one of her big hits. This 1941 recording brings to life for today's uninitiated and nostalgic listeners too such terrific songs as "This is New," "The Saga of Jenny," and "My Ship"—in their original versions.

"Down in the Valley" is a complete contrast—a simple folk opera designed for amateur performance. The rustic plot concerns the tragic love of Brack Weaver and Jennie Parsons (Weill had a thing about girls named Jenny). It was the very first opera ever presented on TV, by NBC Opera Theater, in 1950.

This Los Angeles label has begun a series of LPs devoted to unique folk stringed instruments, often in modern arrangements of popular tunes. This one features the Russian folk instrument with three strings, a relative of the guitar.

David Parker is a concert guitarist most of the time, and applies guitar techniques to this instrument on such varied tunes as "Sukiyaki," "A Taste of Honey," "Never on Sunday," and "Maria Elena." He makes it sound something like a koto on the first, guitar on the second, and Greek bouzoukia on the third tune. Quite diverting.

Deep-shrouded in cloudy mystery—
But still the deluge of the skies,
And then, the light of God-sent wrath,
The thunder of the Valkyries' hoofs

A Weekend With An Inspection Team

By THERON NEWELL

The sound increased until my ears throbbed with the pain.

The great plane shook and shuddered as the motors tugged away at it, and the aircraft slowly moved down the runway. I had to brace myself as the plane lurched forward and I was pushed sideways towards the back of the hold. At last we were airborne and the sound of the motors decreased slightly as the plane leveled off in flight. The movement in the cargo hold stopped as the huge plane adjusted itself to the element for which it was designed — the air.

BESIDE ME sat S/Sgt. Xavier Gonzales of San Jose and SM/Sgt. Anthony M. Jose of San Lorenzo. However, conversation with them was limited to only a few words shouted in their ears because of the noise. Any normal conversation was definitely out.

I sat there, held in tight by the strap around my waist and sitting completely stiff because of the parachute which was strapped uncomfortably tight to my legs and chest.

My mind went back to what had brought me on this flight.

I HAD wanted ot see what the men of the 349th Troop Carrier Wing, or Golden Gate Wing, did on their weekend trips to other posts. So I had put in to go with them on a flight from Hamilton Air Force Base to Portland, Ore.

The flight, originally scheduled to leave on a Friday night, was delayed until a Saturday morning because billeting could not be found for the men at the Portland Air Base.

After the plane left the runway just before 8:30 a.m., the men settled down to the long slow flight to Portland. Some of them opened briefcases and started studying for their job. A few read books, and one or two took the opportunity to catch a little sleep.

T/SGT. JOSEPH B. Puig Jr., of San Francisco, came back into the cargo hold to tell me that I could come up into the cockpit with the crew. He was the flight engineer.

So I left the 14 men who were making the trip to Portland in the cargo hold of the C-119 or Flying Boxcar, and joined the four in the cockpit.

In addition to Sergeant Puig, there were Lt. Col. Robert W. Walkotte of Stockton, the pilot; Maj. Kenneth R. Kuehn of San Carlos, the co-pilot, and Col. Harry T. Butler of Napa, the flight surgeon.

BELOW US stretched the green hills of Sonoma County. A little farther north we could see snow on the higher hills around Clear Lake.

The Trinity Alps and Cascades were glistening in their white mantle of snow. The Willamette Valley and Portland were overcast with a high fog.

We landed at 11 a.m. and the men went directly to lunch and then to work.

THE 349TH TROOP Carrier Wing has its headquarters at Hamilton. The men there must see to it that the various branches of the wing are kept in constant readiness. The branch unit at Portland is the 939th Troop Carrier Group.

Lt. Col. Roy L. Alley, wing staff judge advocate, made a complete inspection of the legal section of the Portland Group to determine if it was kept in readiness for inspection or duty in case of a recall as the wing had during the Cuban crisis. He also reviewed the personnel.

Lt. Col. S. A. Owens, director of materiel for the wing, set about reviewing the supply and maintenance capability of the group. It was up to his inspection to see that the Portland group was always prepared with material.

CAPT. PETER G. Carson of Wing Intelligence, made an inspection of the intelligence activities of the group.

Maj. Samuel W. Boone, comptroller, proceeded to discuss the manning, training and activities of the comptroller personnel in the Portland Group.

T/Sgt. Karl H. Burchardt of wing flying safety, inspected the 939th Troop Carrier Group's safety program.

Maj. Donald T. Brill, information officer, made a survey of the information activities of the Portland Group.

THESE MEN did not make a cursory inspection.

They have a check list of things to be considered, and one by one they went over them with the men and officers of the Portland Group. The officers and men required Saturday afternoon and Sunday morning to complete their inspections.

By Sunday noon, they were through.

Right after noon on Sunday, the plane was brought across the field, and the 18 men and myself boarded it for the return trip to Hamilton.

This time, the head wind that we had bucked going north, was pushing us. Much more quickly, the Willamette Valley, Siskiyous, Trinity Alps and the coast ranges passed beneath us.

IT WAS 4 o'clock when a tired crew set down at the runway at Hamilton. The weekend was over.

What I had always thought as a weekend lark for the men — leaving home and enjoying a flight someplace — turned out to be a strenuous weekend. It was strenuous, not only from flying in the noisy, slow cargo plane, but it was filled with work.

The men who made the trip were of two distinct age groups —the middle aged men and the young.

The older men were training the younger men. They had the background and were giving the younger men the benefit of this experience in war so that the Wing, and therefore a part of this nation, could be kept in readiness.

Colonel Alley is a practicing attorney in San Francisco. Colonel Owens is in the maintenance department of an airline. Major Boone is a budget analyst with the same airline.

COLONEL BUTLER is a doctor in Napa. Colonel Walkotte is a field representative of an oil company. Major Brill is assistant manager of a life insurance company in the Carmel Valley.

So it went through the list of the older men.

They did not need the pay. If they did, they probably could have found something else which was better paying.

BUT THEY are willing to devote one weekend per month to the reserves so that the 349th Troop Carrier Wing will be ready in case of an emergency. They are willing to give of their time and energy so that they might help the young men learn. They are willing to give their hours and know-how so that their nation may be better prepared.

And the young men too, are willing to leave their civilian life for one weekend a month so that this nation may be ever ready.

Embossed Hardwood Discussed

The majority of inquiries about embossed hardwood ask whether it looks like real wood when it is used in the house.

Yes, because most of these hardboards are real wood. Some of the boards are tempered for use out of doors or in high-moisture interior areas such as utility rooms.

These woods catch the look and feel of woven burlap or reproduce the appearance of travertine marble, down to the random pits and indentations characteristic of marble. In many luxury textures, the cost may be less than another simulated product, as it offers advantages of wood.

The greatest use of these embossed boards are as accents or in fun and utility rooms, we're told. They are particularly good where interesting effects are desired without the penalty of delicate care as in children's rooms.

SOME OF the textured boards are used to cover existing surfaces of beat-up furniture. Closet and wardrobe doors of these materials can afford handsome effects.

Interior designers find practical uses of embossed hardwoods, such as a marble pattern used on a coffee table in the family room. Other patterns are painted for unusual effects in screens and room dividers.

Decorators also gravitate to the cut-out filigree patterns of hardboard. One interior designer used these for closet doors in a bathroom, setting them in a pine frame. The filigree was painted a charcoal color, the pine painted gold for a very unusual look in a gold and charcoal colored bathroom.

HARDBOARD is easily handled by a do-it-yourselfer. The one area most do-it-yourselfers need assistance in is in selecting the materials. Some jobs look so professional, it is unbelievable to learn that the kitchen or living room was completely built by a bank clerk or milkman, just from studying plans and reading books.

But when it comes to using the material in chic fashion, left to his own devices, the home handyman may come up with something that looks a little weird.

An excellent job of pine paneling in a living room was done by one young man, with a built-in section for books, television, closet and so on. It was all wrong for that room, however. Furniture was all blonde and draperies were blonde.

IF HE'D left his living room alone with the darker paint that complemented his furniture, and put his talents to use remodeling a play room or a utility room, he'd have improved his house.

The woman is seldom consulted when a man has a yen to get going with his hammer and saw. Even if he asks her opinion, he just seeks it for confirmation of his own. If she doesn't agree, he'll go ahead anyway on the basis of "you'll like it when it's all finished."

Women keep abreast of fashions in the furnishings and house styles, while men busy themselves with keeping up with power equipment and new materials. But most home handymen are determined to build what they feel like building.

SINCE many homes have front entry doors opening directly into the living room, a divider adds much to your search for privacy. For the Easi-Bild pattern that will enable the home handyman to construct the one shown here, send 75 cents to Independent - Journal, P.O. Box 215, Briarcliff Manor, N.Y., 10510, and ask for Room Divider Pattern No. 128. The directions tell how to build the divider to any length and height required. Units can be placed one over one from floor to ceiling, or placed on top of a cabinet. Shelves can be decorated with potted plants, glassware, china, etc. Each divider is built as a separate unit, then arranged to fill your needs. And rearranging for a change in decorating plans is simple. An interesting "step" arrangement can be attained by using a long divider for base, then placing successively shorter units on top. Smart combinations are endless, as are the decorative and storage possibilities. The result is a cozier atmosphere.

THE GARDEN PAGE

The Magnificent Magnolia Is Marvelous Choice For Marin

Some families of plants—like some families of people—are spectacular all the way through.

The magnolia clan is a family like that, and each member—whether it's a towering evergreen tree or a dainty deciduous shrub—is a traffic-stopper in its own right.

Its glossy foliage and fragrant, creamy blooms, seven and eight inches across, lend grace to the garden with room enough to handle a specimen tree that slowly reaches a height of 80 feet and spreads 40 feet across. If you have an estate that needs something of monumental size and generous habit, the Southern Magnolia is for you.

For the smaller garden, however, we recommend the more modest, but no less spectacular, St. Mary's Magnolia.

ST. MARY'S Magnolia has the double advantage of being smaller and more compact in growth, plus blooming earlier in its life. It is grown from graft for nurserymen to insure uniform results—and the results are more than desirable.

The tree gets about 30 feet high, grows fairly rapidly, boasts handsome foliage, and produces blooms that are literally platter size—a foot or more in diameter when fully opened.

There are literally dozens of deciduous magnolias in the world, and many of them have been tried in California. Fortunately, nurserymen have narrowed the list for us to those which do best in our climate.

MOST WIDELY planted are Saucer Magnolias, those lovely show pieces of late winter or early spring. They burst forth in a riot of tulip-like blooms before the leaves come, and make large shrubs or small trees ideal for small gardens, since they never crowd. Color ranges from white through all shades of purple.

Anise Magnolia provides us with a slender, medium-size deciduous tree, whose flowers are quite fragrant and very white. The name derives from the fact that there is a fragrance of anise when any of the leaves are crushed.

For special effects in tubs—wherever an accent plant is needed—nature seems to have invented the Star Magnolia.

IT REMAINS about eight feet in height without your help. You can reduce it to a single trunk if necessary for your purposes, but by nature it seems to have several trunks, each one interesting. This gives a shrubby effect when fully clothed with foliage.

The Star is excellent for espalier work and a natural for use in or around the patio. Among its other virtues are masses of fragrant pinwheel blooms in late winter or early spring. So star-like is the effect of its pink or white flower mass that both the common and botanical names take notice of it.

There are many other deciduous magnolias available in California and if you visit your nursery now, yon can see many of them in bloom.

AS A GENERAL rule, the deciduous magnolias are more widely grown here in the north while the evergreen varieties are top favorites in Southern California. However, both deciduous and evergreen magnolias have been grown successfully in our area.

As far as culture goes, the magnolias are comfortably self-reliant. They seem to be virtually pest - free and prefer you to leave them alone—don't prune.

While the magnolias will grow under many conditions, in general they like a soil rich in humus and a good supply of moisture—but not wet soil. If you grow camellias, you know exactly what the magnolia likes best.

OFTEN THE landscape fairly begs for a small but truly spectacular tree. Such is the Saucer Magnolia with its huge cup-shaped flowers of white and purple, particularly outstanding since they appear on totally bare branches. But it is just one of a long list of magnificent magnolias. (Photo courtesy of California Assn. of Nurserymen)

More Fruit Trees In Smaller Space

The art of growing a crop of fruit in a limited space goes back several centuries to the suburban gardens of England and France.

The French were actually the first people to employ the system of training known as "espalier," but they were rivaled by the English in performance and quality.

Any California gardener can enjoy the same results with very little effort if he acts now. Nurseries have trees growing on dwarf stocks available now in the economical bareroot condition.

THERE WILL be a limited supply of already trained espaliers at nurseries during January, but a generous supply of regular dwarf trees in a greater range of varieties. Usually these dwarf trees have already started to branch, so there is not much trouble training your own—and you can get a lot more trees for the money!

You will find choice varieties available in apples, pears (the two easiest to train), cherries, peaches, nectarines and plums. Just choose a wall or fence with a sunny exposure and buy enough trees to fill the space at eight to 10 feet apart.

Prepare the planting hole according to the instructions of your nurseryman, using good soil for backfill, but no fertilizer. Set the bud union exactly at ground level.

IF YOU PLANT too deep, the top will take root and this will cause your tree to become the usual large orchard size.

As soon as you can select a pair of opposite branches a foot or two above the bud, establish a training device with a horizontal wire, usually affixed to the background fence or wall with shelf brackets. Start two branches horizontally, with a a leader heading upward to provide the second tier, and so on.

Pruning during the growing season is important—to encourage the formation of fruit-producing spurs along the branches.

Some Tips On Staking Of Plants

If you consider it desirable to stake your plants for support, put in the stakes at planting time to reduce danger of injuring the roots or tops.

Supporting stakes should be used when there is danger of damage from wind. It also will keep stems straighter, foliage cleaner and facilitate cultivation.

Try to use stakes that blend with the plant. Bamboo is attractive in the garden. Wooden sticks may be painted green to reduce conspicuousness.

In tying the plants to stakes, begin from the bottom and continue upward as the growth develops. Use a soft material for tying as sharp twines will cut tender growth.

A CHECKLIST FOR GARDENERS OF MARIN

- If you haven't already, prune roses this month. At the same time strip off any remaining leaves that have not fallen of their own accord. Clean up fallen leaves around roses.
- The perennial vegetables — artichokes, asparagus and rhubarb — are not only good eating, but are attractive in the ornamental garden. They can go in now.
- This is bareroot planting season when your dormant plants such as roses and trees are least expensive and easiest to move. It's the best time to plant flowering trees to add to your enjoyment of spring bloom. Give them a generous hole, soak them well, then let the winter rains take over.
- Violas and pansies can still be set out over a bulb bed. Primula Malacoides, the Fairy Primrose, can go in for an early spring border in shaded beds.
- Winter feeding will often do surprising things to a bedraggled lawn.
- If you haven't already done so, an after-the-storm clean-up is in order, picking up the leaves, twigs and other debris left by winds and rains.
- New seed catalogs are coming out, and worth your perusal for planting ideas even if your purchases are not mail order.

THE BITTERSWEET romance of a princess and a handsome tutor, roles played by Grace Kelly and Louis Jourdan, is the central theme of the movie, "The Swan," to be seen tonight at 9 o'clock on KRON-TV.

WEEKEND SHOWS

A Comedy Special On Seven

Channel 7 (KGO-TV) presents another of its locally-produced specials, this time an hour of comedy starring the team of Rowan & Martin, tonight at 6:30 o'clock.

Bing Crosby will preside over the first anniversary program of "The Hollywood Palace" at 9:30 on the same channel, with a guest list that includes the Smothers Brothers, the King Sisters, George Burns, Debbie Reynolds, Groucho Marx and a host of other big names.

Also on TV tonight:

KTVU will carry the Santa Clara-University of San Francisco basketball game at 8 o'clock; KRON will show the romantic comedy movie, "The Swan" with Grace Kelly, Alec Guinness and Louis Jourdan at 9; and KGO will begin the Bob Hope movie, "The Seven Little Foys," at 10:30.

Educational station KQED has scheduled an unusual film on the disintegration of an Alaskan glacier at 6:30 p.m., a discussion and performance of Beethoven music by the Fine Arts Quartet at 9 o'clock, and an English dramatization of Guy de Maupassant's short stories at 10.

TOMORROW marks the first of a series of Sunday noon concerts on KGO by the Boston Symphony Orchestra with Erich Leinsdorf conducting Wagner's "Good Friday Spell" from "Parsifal" and Strauss' "Don Quixote."

KPIX's Sunday schedule includes a re-showing of that lasting favorite, the movie "The Wizard of Oz," starring Judy Garland, and with Danny Kaye as host at 7 p.m. Also on channel 5: A report on the military demarcation line dividing South and North Korea on "The 20th Century" at 6 p.m., and a "World War I" study at 6:30 of American doughboys in battle as shown on rare film footage recently found in the Imperial War Museum in London. An original hour drama is scheduled for 9 p.m.

KRON's "Profiles in Courage" at 6:30 p.m. has Peter Lawford portraying Gen. Alexander William Doniphan, while Walt Disney begins a re-run of "Chico, the Misunderstood Coyote" at 7:30.

On KGO, that station's documentary on San Francisco's Chinatown will be repeated at 9 a.m., "Discovery '64" at 11:30 a.m. will deal with snakes, "Directions '65" at 1 p.m. will take up "The World of Franz Kafka."

As for movies, part II of "Exodus" will be shown on KGO at 9 p.m., followed by Richard Burton and Olivia de Havilland in "My Cousin Rachel" at 11:15. Greer Garson in "That Forsyte Woman" will be on KTVU at 7 p.m.

For sports fans, there will be pro basketball, Los Angeles Lakers vs. St. Louis Hawks, on KGO at 2 o'clock; golf, Dave Marr against Britain's Bernard Hunt in England, on KGO at 4; ski jumping and swamp buggy racing on the new "Sports in Action" series on KRON at 4; and the U.S. Grand Prix auto race and comedy softball on KPIX's "Sports Spectacular" at 2:30.

LYNDON B. JOHNSON'S march up the political ladder culminates Wednesday with his inauguration for his first full term as President of the United States. All three television networks will carry the ceremonies beginning at 7:30 a.m. News photos show (1) Johnson as a young congressman in 1937 with President Franklin D. Roosevelt; (2) as a U.S. senator conferring with President Harry Truman; (4) as vice president in 1961 with President John F. Kennedy, and (3) as President in November of 1963, conferring with former President Dwight D. Eisenhower.

THE INAUGURATION

TV Commentator Prepares For Big Job With Research

WASHINGTON — President James Garfield considered the traditional ceremony of the Presidential inauguration such a bore that he wryly suggested it be enlivened by including not only the swearing in of the new Chief Executive but the beheading of the old.

"Fortunately for all concerned," says Howard K. Smith, "inaugurals have become far more interesting in recent years, especially since television has brought the President so close to the people."

SMITH, VETERAN foreign correspondent and Washington commentator, will anchor ABC-TV's coverage of the ceremonies Wednesday, starting at 7:30 a.m.

His preliminary research for the task sheds interesting light upon the human side of the men whose tenancy of the White House commences the day they are inaugurated.

"For instance, while it is traditional for the outgoing President to ride with his successor to the event," points out Smith, "he usually makes himself scarce immediately after the ceremonies are over. But President Taft was so reluctant to leave his comfortable abode in the White House that he rode all the way back there with the newly-inducted Woodrow Wilson, and then hung around until Wilson asked him to have a sandwich. It took a phone call from Taft's wife to get him away."

SOME PRESIDENTS, reports Smith, so disliked their successors that they refused to participate in the ceremonies at all. John Adams, John Quincy Adams and General Grant all stayed away.

"Hoover accompanied Franklin Roosevelt, but didn't seem to enjoy the ride," says Smith. "The Hoovers and the Kennedys had much in common, incidentally. Jacqueline Kennedy is fluent in French. Mrs. Hoover spoke excellent Chinese. And the Hoovers and Kennedys set the consistently best table in White House history. Moreover, like Kennedy, Hoover is said to have turned his salary back to the Treasury or to charity."

Smith reveals that James and Dolly Madison gave the first Inaugural Ball, but they departed immediately after dinner, leaving their guests to dance to music by fiddlers Dolly Madison had imported from New York for the occasion. At President Grant's ball, no liquor was served. Wilson discontinued the balls in 1913 as being too frivolous for the time, but they've been reinstated again.

"WILSON HAD one White House rule I particularly admire," says Smith. "He declared there would be no political conversation at meal time. Meals, he maintained, were a time for relaxation and enjoyment of food and company."

This year President Johnson has indicated he will appear without the silk top hat worn by Kennedy, and in less formal attire. Whether he does or does not, Smith and colleague Edward P. Morgan will be warmly clad against the chilly Washington air — and they will silently wonder why Franklin Roosevelt switched the date of inaugurals from March 4 to January.

HISTORIANS SAY he did it to lessen the time between elections and the takeover by a new administration.
